SECTION 1.—INTERNATIONAL CLASSIFICATION

The short titles associated below with the international class numbers are terms designed merely for quick identification and are not an official part of the international classification. The full names of international classes are given in section 6.1 of the trademark rules of practice.

The designation "U.S. Cl." appearing in this section refers to the U.S. class in effect prior to Sep. 1, 1973 rather than the international class which applies to applications filed on or after that date. For adoption of international classification see notice in the OFFICIAL GAZETTE of Jun. 26, 1973 (911 O.G. TM 210).

The short titles associated below with the international class numbers are terms designed merely for quick identification and are not an official part of the international classification. The full names of international classes are given in section 6.1 of the trademark rules of practice.

The designation "U.S. Cl." appearing in this section refers to the U.S. class in effect prior to Sep. 1, 1973 rather than the international class which applies to applications filed on or after that date. For adoption of international classification see notice in the OFFICIAL GAZETTE of Jun. 26, 1973 (911 O.G. TM 210).

Reminders Concerning the Revised Rules of Practice in Trademark Cases

The Office offers the following reminders concerning certain requirements under the revised Rules of Practice in Trademark Cases to ensure proper and efficient processing of trademark papers.

1. Statement of A Bona Fide Intention to Use in Commerce

The Office has received a number of applications filed based on Trademark Act Section 44 which contain no claim of bona fide intention to use the mark in commerce. Sections 44(d)(2) and 44(e), and revised Trademark Rule 2.21 state the requirements for filing a trademark application based on a foreign application or registration. These sections require, among other things, that all applications filed pursuant to Section 44 state a bona fide intention to use the mark in commerce. Therefore if the application is filed based only on Section 44, and applicant has not recited a claim of bona fide intention to use the mark in commerce, the application will not be accorded a filing date and will be returned to the applicant.

This statement must include the words "in commerce." The statement should be set forth in its entirety prominently in the opening statement of the application to ensure that the application is accorded a filing date. The applicant may repeat the statement in the application declaration, if desired.

2. Assertion of Two Bases

If the applicant wishes to file based on both a bona fide intention to use the mark in commerce under Trademark Act Section 1(b) and a foreign application or registration under Trademark Act Section 44, the applicant must clearly indicate its intention to do so. In a Section 44 filing the Office will not presume Trademark Act Section 1(b) as an additional basis for filing by the mere statement of a bona fide intention to use the mark in commerce. If the applicant wishes to claim an additional basis under Section 1(b) of the Act it should indicate its intention with a separate statement claiming a basis under Section 1(b).

3. Filing Papers Before Notification of Serial Number

The Office recommends that applicants wait until they have received the filing fee receipt before filing any papers related to a trademark application. The filing fee receipt includes the assigned application serial number. The applicant should refer to the serial number in filing any paper to ensure that the paper is associated with the correct application file. For example, if applicant has filed a photocopy of its application in order to receive a filing date and follows up the photocopy with an original document, the applicant should wait for the filing fee receipt in order to have a serial number with which to reference the second document. Without the reference number, the papers may be returned to the applicant or the papers may be identified as a new filing, and accorded a new serial number.

In the same manner, it is preferable that amendments to allege use under Trademark Act Section 1(c) should not be filed until a filing fee receipt has issued and applicant can reference the serial number of the appropriate application when it submits its amendment to allege use.

The filing of an amendment to allege use has important ramifications in the publication of the mark and production of the Official Gazette. Therefore it is especially important that the Office be able to identify and process those papers promptly.

If the applicant files an amendment to allege use along with other amendments, it would be helpful if the applicant provides some indication that the filing is both an amendment to allege use and other amendments.

4. Section 8 Affidavit Requirements

Trademark Act Section 8, as amended, and revised Trademark Rule 2.162 requires, among other things, that registrants set forth the "goods or services recited in the registration on or in connection with which the mark is in use in commerce." The goods and services must also be set forth in any affidavit asserting excusable nonuse. Formerly, applicants were not required to set forth the specific goods and services. Applicant may meet the requirement to specify the goods or services either by listing the goods or services or by incorporating the goods and services by reference, e.g., "The registered mark is in use in commerce with all the goods and services listed in the registration." The list of goods and services or applicant's incorporation of the goods and services by reference should appear somewhere in the body of the affidavit.

Applicants should also take note of the revised requirement for a specimen or facsimile for each class of goods or services in the registration. The specimen or facsimile for each class must be filed prior to the end of the sixth year. Failure to meet these revised requirements may result in cancellation of all or part of a registration.

5. Filing of Miscellaneous Papers

Every paper filed with the Office which relates to an application or registration should include the serial number of the application or the registration number of the registration. The best practice would be to have the application number or registration number appear on every single sheet of paper which an applicant or registrant files with the Office, including any substitute specimens which applicant may file. Those papers filed with the Office which do not have the application serial number or the registration number reference on them must be identified by Office personnel using alternative means such as looking up the mark or owner in the automated search system. However, if papers become detached, the information which the Office needs to join a particular piece of correspondence to the correct file may not be available.

6. Time for Filing Corrections to Amendments to Allege Use

Applicants should note that Rule 2.76(a) provides that filing an amendment to allege use of a mark in commerce under section 1(c) is only permitted between the time of filing the application and the time the examiner approves the mark for publication. If applicant's amendment to allege use fails to meet the minimum requirements for an amendment to allege use as set out in Rule 2.76(e)(3), applicant must correct those defects prior to approval of the mark for publication or the application will be published without any consideration of the amendment to allege use. If the file is approved for publication before applicant can correct its amendment to allege use, applicant will be required to wait until a notice of allowance issues before it can file its affidavit of use. In these circumstances the fee applicant submitted for its original amendment to allege use will not be refunded or applied to the later filed statement of use.

NOTICE OF THE CHARTER RENEWAL FOR THE PUBLIC ADVISORY COMMITTEE FOR TRADEMARK AFFAIRS

In accordance with the provisions of the Federal Advisory Committee Act, 5 U.S.C. App. (1976), and after consultation with GSA, it has been determined that the renewal of the charter of the Public Advisory Committee for Trademark Affairs is in the public interest in connection with the performance of duties imposed on the Department by law.

The Committee was first established in September 1970, and is now being renewed. The renewal was signed on April 4, 1990. The Committee's purpose is to advise the Patent and Trademark Office concerning steps which can be taken to increase the efficiency and effectiveness of administration of the Trademark Act and to provide a continuing flow of knowledge from the private sector to the Government in the field of trademarks.

Subject to the approval of the Assistant Secretary and Commissioner of Patents and Trademarks, the Committee members will be drawn from the regular, associate, and supplementary membership of the United States Trademark Association. The membership is balanced and selected by the President of said association. The Committee will function solely as an advisory body, and in compliance with the provisions of the Federal Advisory Committee Act.

Requirements for patent applications containing nucleotide sequence and/or amino acid sequence disclosures

Agency: Patent and Trademark Office, Commerce
Action: Final Rule

Summary: The Patent and Trademark Office (PTO) is amending its regulations to establish a standardized format for descriptions of nucleotide and amino acid sequence data submitted as a part of patent applications, in conjunction with the required submission of this data in computer readable form. The standardized format is needed to permit proper examination and processing of such applications and to improve quality and efficiency of the examination process, promote conformity with usage of the scientific community, and improve dissemination of sequence data in electronic form. The standard symbols and format for sequence data, and the submission of this data in computer readable form, will be required for most disclosures of nucleotide and amino acid sequence data in patent applications filed after the effective date of the rule change.

Effective Date: October 1, 1990

For Further Information Contact: Lois E. Boland, Special Program Examiner, Office of the Assistant Commissioner for Patents, Crystal Park 2 - Suite 919, by telephone at (703) 557-8384 or by mail marked to her attention and addressed to the Commissioner of Patents and Trademarks, Washington, D.C. 20231.

Supplementary Information: Currently, problems exist in the presentation, examination and printing of nucleotide and amino acid sequence data because of the lack of uniformity in submission of sequence data to the PTO and the impracticality of properly searching and examining sequences submitted in paper form. For example, it is impractical for an examiner, searching a particularly lengthy sequence in a non-conforming format, to accurately key the query necessary to search the sequence in a computerized search. Further, the lack of standardized symbol use and standardized format results in a very difficult comparison, on the part of the examiner and the public, of what is claimed in a given patent application and what is disclosed in the prior art. Still further, the number of patent applications containing nucleotide and amino acid sequences is increasing every year. The major examination problems can be attributed to the volume of data and the use of inconsistent paper formats. The lack of consistency in symbols used and formatting requires examiners to attempt to convert the sequence data, as it appears in patent applications, into formats that are consistent with those appearing in the prior art in order to make proper evaluations of the patentability of the inventions claimed in the patent applications. Problems are also encountered in the printing of nucleotide and amino acid sequence data in patents because the data must be rekeyed under current patent printing procedures. This could easily result in the printing of erroneous sequences. In summary, the diversity and complexity of nucleotide and amino acid sequence data result in searching and analysis difficulties both within the PTO and outside the PTO, decreased accuracy of search and reproduction, and increased cost.

The PTO is amending its regulations to establish a standardized format for descriptions of nucleotide and amino acid sequence data submitted as a part of patent applications, in conjunction with the required submission of the data in computer readable form, which would result in the following advantages:

1. Cost savings in input of sequence data;
2. A practical and more accurate sequence search capability;
3. Improved interference detection;
4. More efficient examination;
5. Improved accuracy of printed sequences;
6. Creation of a PTO database of most patent-disclosed sequence data;
7. Improved public data access and dissemination in electronic form;
8. Exchange of published sequence data, in electronic form, with the Japanese Patent Office (JPO) and the European Patent Office (EPO) in a Trilateral Sequence Exchange Project;

9. Conformity with the scientific community; and
10. The encouragement of other government agencies and private vendors to include sequences appearing in patents in their data bases.

In those areas of biotechnology in which nucleotide and/or amino acid sequence information is significant, many patent applicants are accustomed to, or familiar with, the submission of such sequence information to various sequence databases, such as GenBank, which is produced by the National Institutes of Health. Information regarding GenBank can be obtained from GenBank/Intelligenetics, Inc., 700 East El Camino Real, Mountain View, California 94040, (415) 962-7364. In order to facilitate such submissions, or merely for the purpose of researching and developing sequence information, many eventual patent applicants also generate or encode sequence information in computer readable form. In view of this, compliance with the rules herein should not pose a significant additional burden for these applicants. In order to further facilitate compliance with the rules that follow, the PTO will make available to the public input programs that are based on the Authorin program produced by GenBank. These input programs are specifically tailored to the requirements herein. The PTO presently intends to offer training for applicants and/or their attorneys to aid in their compliance with these rules. Details regarding availability of the modified Authorin program and scheduling of training programs will be announced in the PTO's Official Gazette.

The standard symbols and format, as well as the submission of sequence data in computer readable form, will be required for all disclosures of nucleotide and amino acid sequence data in new patent applications filed after the effective date of the rule change. Compliance with the rules, on a voluntary basis, is encouraged for applications filed prior to the effective date of these final rules. It is envisioned that, for the great majority of applications affected by these rules, applicants will not be subjected to significant additional burdens, with regard to both time and/or costs, in order to comply with these rules. However, if exceptional circumstances do arise and certain applicants experience specific hardships in attempting to comply with these rules, the PTO will consider appropriate petitions, filed in accordance with 37 CFR §1.183, to waive the rules, for which any fees may be refunded or waived dependent upon the particular circumstances. The final rules will not apply to reissue applications or reexamination proceedings filed after the effective date unless the application which matured into the patent sought to be reissued or reexamined was subject to these rules. Further, the final rules will not apply, except on a voluntary basis, to continuation or divisional applications filed after the effective date unless any application upon which 35 U.S.C. 120 priority is claimed was also subject to these rules. The final rules will apply to continuation-in-part applications filed after the effective date where any application upon which 35 U.S.C. 120 priority is claimed was subject to these rules or where the material that is newly added in the continuation-in-part includes sequence information that falls within the requirements of these rules. For those continuation-in-part applications that are filed after the effective date where the application upon which 35 U.S.C. 120 priority is claimed was not subject to these rules, compliance with these rules, on a voluntary basis, is encouraged.

The final rules define a set of symbols and procedures that will be both mandatory and the only way that an applicant will be permitted to submit certain information about a sequence that falls within the definitions used in these rules. Thus, §1.821 defines a sequence for the purpose of these final rules; sets forth the requirements for specific symbols, formats, paper and computer readable copies of the sequence; and specifies the deadlines for complying with the requirements. Sections 1.822 to 1.824 set forth detailed descriptions of the requirements that will be mandatory for the presentation of sequence data, and §1.825 sets forth procedures that will be available to an applicant in the event that amendments to the sequence information or replacement of the computer readable copy become necessary. There is nothing in these final rules that is intended to alter in any manner the prohibition against the introduction of new matter (35 U.S.C. 132 and 251), or the prohibition against the introduction of information that is not described in the application as originally filed (35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph).

With regard to the symbols and format to be used for nucleotide and/or amino acid sequence data set forth in § 1.822 and the form and format for sequence submissions in computer readable form set forth in § 1.824, the PTO intends to accommodate progress in the areas of both standardization and computerization as they relate to sequence data by subsequently amending the rules to take into account any such progress. This progress will probably be reflected in the refinement of or liberalization of these final rules. For example, progress in the area of the standardization of sequence data will likely result in a more comprehensive rule; and the branched sequences and the D-amino acids that are currently excluded from the rules may, in the future, be brought within the scope of the rules once the necessary standardization technology becomes available. As a further example, the computer readable form is currently limited to diskettes and tapes, but it readily can be seen that progress in the technology for developing databases of the type the PTO has envisioned will likely permit a broadening of the permissible types of computer readable forms that may be submitted. The same can be said for the computer/operating-system configurations that are currently permitted. As the PTO becomes able to provide greater refinement and liberality in these areas, the PTO will do so by appropriate amendments to the rules herein.

These final rules are part of an ongoing coordinated effort in the private sector and among the EPO, the JPO and the PTO to standardize the use of symbols and the format for sequence information, in order to permit the exchange and use of each other's published data. The PTO has signed a Memorandum of Understanding with the EPO and the JPO that calls for the capture and exchange of sequence data contained in patent applications filed with the three Offices from 1990 onward. A final agreement relating to the details of this undertaking was reached in October 1989. A briefing setting forth the PTO's intentions for handling patent applications containing sequence data was held for the benefit of interested bar and industry groups on July 14, 1988. Draft rules were circulated to interested bar and industry groups on September 23, 1988. Numerous organizations and individuals filed comments in response to both the briefing and the draft rules. Finally, a notice of proposed rulemaking relating to the Requirements for Patent Applications Containing Nucleotide Sequence and/or Amino Acid Sequence Disclosures was published in the Federal Register, 54 FR 18671 (May 2, 1989), and in the Official Gazette, 1102 O.G. 34 (May 16, 1989).

In this notice of final rulemaking, a description of the changes in the text of the proposed rules is provided along with an explanation of the reasons supporting the changes. In addition, comments received in response to the notice of proposed rulemaking are analyzed. Finally, an explanation of the content of the final rules is provided.

Changes in Text of Proposed Rules

Several changes have been made in the text of the final rules from the text of the proposed rules which were published for comment in the notice of proposed rulemaking. Those changes are discussed below.

Section 1.821:

In the preamble for paragraph (a) of this section as proposed, the phrase "a sequence" as proposed has been replaced with the phrase "an unbranched sequence", and the sentence "Branched sequences are specifically excluded from this definition," has been inserted between the first and second sentences of the preamble as proposed for the purpose of clearly excluding branched sequences from the scope of the final rule. Due to the lack of a generally accepted standardized method for the representation and search of branched sequences in computer databases, it was decided that, until the requisite standards are developed, branched sequences would be excluded from the scope of the final rule. As such, these regulations are not applicable to branched sequences. In the first sentence of the preamble, "is interpreted to mean" has been changed to "means." This latter change is considered to be editorial in nature and is not intended to change the meaning of the preamble in any way.

In paragraphs (a)(1) and (a)(2) of this section, the phrase "in the description and/or the separate part of the disclosure on paper copy corresponding to, but not including," as proposed has been replaced with the phrase "as set forth in § 1.822(b), but shall not be shown explicitly in". These changes and the changes, discussed below, that were made to § 1.822(b) and the addition of § 1.822(p) were made for the purpose of clarifying the treatment to be accorded modified nucleotide bases and modified and unusual amino acids.

In paragraph (a)(2) of this section, the sentence "Only peptides or proteins containing normal peptide bonds are embraced by this definition," as proposed has been replaced by the sentence "Any peptide or protein that can be expressed as a sequence using the symbols in § 1.822(b)(2) in conjunction with a description elsewhere in the 'Sequence Listing' to describe, for example, modified linkages, cross links, end caps, non-peptidyl bonds, etc., is embraced by this definition." This change was made to clarify the scope of the rules relative to amino acids. Accordingly, an amino acid sequence will not be excluded from the scope of the rules merely due to the presence of one or several modified linkages, non-peptidyl bonds, etc. If an amino acid sequence, containing L-amino acids, can be represented by a string of amino acid abbreviations, with reference, where necessary, to a features table to explain modifications in the sequence, the sequence is embraced by the rules. The use of the terms "peptide or protein" implies, however, that the amino acids in a given sequence are linked by at least three consecutive peptide bonds.

In paragraph (b) of this section, the terms "above definition" have been changed to "definition in paragraph (a) of this section" to clearly identify the definition to which reference is being made.

In paragraph (c) of this section, third and fourth sentences have been added to explicitly set forth the procedure to be followed when a computer readable form of a new application is identical with a computer readable form of another application. In that situation, an applicant may make reference to the other application and computer readable form in lieu of filing a duplicate computer readable form in the new application.

In paragraphs (g) and (h) of this section, the phrases "the requirements of one or more of" have been changed to "any of the requirements of." A corresponding change has been made in the body of paragraphs (g) and (h) by deleting "one or more of" and "above." These changes are considered to be editorial in nature. No change in substance is intended.

In paragraph (g) of this section, the phrase "two months from the date of filing or" has been deleted from the paragraph as proposed to clearly indicate that notices will be sent by the PTO to applicants for all failures to comply with the rules. Further, the phrase "whichever is later, in which to comply, or the application will be considered to be abandoned" has been changed to "in order to prevent abandonment of the application." This latter change is considered to be editorial in nature. No change in substance is intended.

In paragraph (h) of this section, the phrase "or no international search report will be established by the United States Patent and Trademark Office as an International Searching Authority for those claims in the application that are directed to nucleotide and/or amino acid sequences" has been deleted from the paragraph as proposed. International applications that fail to comply with any of paragraphs (b) through (f) of this section will be searched to the extent possible without the benefit of the information in computer readable form. In the first sentence of this paragraph, "further" has been changed to "other" in view of the severely limited time constraints for processing PCT patent applications. In the second to the last sentence of this paragraph, the phrase "include new matter or" has been inserted before the phrase "go beyond the disclosure in the application as filed." This phrase was inserted to acknowledge the parallel, for later reference, between the U.S. and PCT standards for new matter. The last sentence of this paragraph, as proposed, has been deleted to more closely parallel paragraph (g) of this section.

Paragraph (i) has been added to this section to address the concerns of the private sector with respect to the weight that may ultimately be accorded an omission of an item of information which is not required under the rule, regardless of whether that item has been designated as "recommended" or "optional." This paragraph makes clear that neither the presence nor absence of information which is not required under the rules will create a presumption that such information is necessary to satisfy any of the requirements of 35 U.S.C. 112. Further, this paragraph states that the grant of a patent on an application that is subject to §§ 1.821 through 1.825 constitutes a conclusive presumption that the granted patent complies with the requirements of these rules.

Paragraph (j) has been added to this section to facilitate administrative processing of all application papers, computer readable forms and fees filed under this section. Accordingly, all such application papers, computer readable forms and fees should be marked "Box SEQUENCE."

Section 1.822

In paragraph (a) of this section as proposed, "following requirements" has been changed to "requirements of paragraphs (b) through (p) of this section." This change was made to clearly delineate the requirements being referenced.

In the preamble for paragraph (b) of this section, various changes have been made to the rule as proposed to clarify the codes that may be used for the nucleotide and/or amino acid sequence characters in the representations of the nucleotide and amino acid sequences and to clarify the treatment to be accorded modified nucleotide bases and modified and unusual amino acids. The phrase "and (b)(2)" has been substituted for "through (b)(4)" because the lists of modified bases and modified and unusual amino acids that were set forth in paragraphs (b)(3) and (b)(4) of this section as proposed are now separately set forth in newly drafted paragraph (p) of this section as adopted. In conjunction with the separate listing of the modified bases and modified and unusual amino acids in paragraph (p) of this section, the substance of the second sentence of this paragraph as proposed has been deleted and has been set forth in paragraph (p) of this section as adopted. Three new sentences have been added to paragraph (b) of this section as proposed. The first new sentence sets forth the principle that only those codes listed in paragraphs (b)(1) and (b)(2) shall be used in the representation of the nucleotide and amino acid sequences. The second and third new sentences describe the manner in which modified bases and amino acids may be presented in nucleotide and amino acid sequences by virtue of the use of the codes set forth in paragraphs (b)(1) and (b)(2) of this section. The changes to paragraph (b) of this section as proposed serve to clearly delineate those codes that may be used in the representation of nucleotide and amino acid sequences from those that may be used elsewhere in the description or the "Sequence Listing." Accordingly, only those codes that are to be used in the representation of sequences are now set forth in paragraph (b) of this section as adopted whereas the controlled vocabulary for modified bases and modified and unusual amino acids is now separately set forth in paragraph (p) of this section as adopted. The second sentence of this paragraph, as proposed, has been deleted from this paragraph and now appears in 1.823(a), as adopted.

In paragraph (d) of this section, the term "above" has been replaced by the term "below". The fact that the representation of double stranded nucleotide sequences will not be permitted in the "Sequence Listings" has obviated the need to accommodate those situations in which the coding regions of the coding strand of a double stranded nucleotide sequence and the amino acids corresponding to the codons in the coding strand of that nucleotide are depicted. In those situations, it was considered that the correspondence between the amino acids and the codons in the coding strand could most clearly be illustrated by positioning the amino acids above the nucleotide rather than below the nucleotide, as is more conventionally done. This arrangement was then, for the purpose of consistency, extended to the representation of all amino acids that corresponded to codons in the coding regions of a nucleotide. As stated above, because double stranded nucleotides will not be permitted in the "Sequence Listings," there is no longer a need to depict amino acids above corresponding codons. As such, paragraph (d) as adopted requires the depiction of amino acids corresponding to codons in the coding parts of a nucleotide sequence immediately below, not above, the corresponding codons.

Further, in paragraph (d) of this section, the new sentence "Where a codon spans an intron, the amino acid symbol shall be typed below the portion of the codon containing two nucleotides," has been added to the end of the paragraph, as proposed. This sentence was added to clarify the representation of an amino acid that corresponds to a codon that spans an intron. It is considered to be self-explanatory.

In paragraph (e) of this section, the term "code" has been replaced by the term "abbreviation" for consistency with paragraph (b)(2) of this section.

In paragraph (f) of this section, the sentence "Leftover bases, fewer than 10 in number, at the end of noncoding parts of a sequence shall be grouped together and separated from adjacent groups of 10 or 3 bases by a space," has been added to the end of the paragraph as proposed. This sentence was added to clarify the representation of bases in a nucleotide sequence in those situations where an accumulation of bases, fewer than 10 in number, occur at the end of the non-coding part of a sequence.

Paragraphs (j) and (k) of this section as proposed have been changed to reflect the fact that the representation of double stranded nucleotide sequences will not be permitted in the "Sequence Listing." In paragraph (j) of this section as proposed, "single stranded" has been deleted, and "only by a single strand," has been inserted between "presented" and "in." The effect of these changes, in conjunction with the deletion of paragraph (k) as proposed, is to preclude the presentation of double stranded nucleotides in the "Sequence Listing."

Insofar as paragraph (k) of this section as proposed has been deleted, paragraphs (l) through (p) as proposed have been redesignated as paragraphs (k) through (o), respectively, as adopted.

In paragraph (n) of this section as proposed (paragraph (m) as adopted), the procedure for numbering amino acid sequences has been changed. In the first sentence of the paragraph as proposed, "shall" has been changed to "may" to indicate that the numbering procedure dependent upon the identification of the mature protein is optional, not mandatory. This change was made to alleviate the concern that there may be instances when an applicant may not have identified the mature protein. As such, an alternative numbering procedure has been set forth for use when the numbering is not based upon the identification of the mature protein. The sentence "Otherwise, the enumeration of amino acids shall start at the first amino acid at the amino terminal as number 1," has been added to the paragraph as proposed to set forth this alternative numbering procedure. The second sentence of this paragraph as proposed has been moved to the end of the paragraph as adopted so as to be applicable to both of the numbering procedures that are set forth in the paragraph as adopted. The third sentence of this paragraph as proposed has been clarified to indicate that the pre-sequences, pro-sequences (newly added), pre-pro-sequences (newly added) and signal sequences referred to are, in fact, amino acids preceding the mature protein.

In paragraph (p) as proposed (paragraph (o) as adopted), the phrase "A partial sequence shall be numbered as a separate sequence and" has been deleted. "numbered" has been changed to "presented"; "separate sequence identifiers, with" has been added between "with" and "the"; and the sentence "A sequence that is made up of one or more noncontiguous segments of a larger sequence or segments from different sequences shall be presented as a separate sequence," has been added to the end of the paragraph as proposed. These changes have been made to address the concerns that the requirements for the presentation and numbering of partial, gapped and hybrid sequences were ambiguous.

Paragraph (p) as adopted is new relative to the text of this section as proposed. The substance of this new paragraph corresponds to that set forth in the second sentence of paragraph (b) as proposed. As such, the comments made above with regard to paragraph (b) of this section are applicable herein.

Section 1.823:

In paragraph (a) of this section as adopted, two new sentences have been added to the paragraph as proposed. The first new sentence sets forth requirements relating to page and line length. The second new sentence was transferred from § 1.822(b) in its entirety. This transfer was made to provide a more logical presentation of all of the requirements for the "Sequence Listing."

In paragraph (b) of this section, the second sentence as proposed has been replaced by three new sentences to more clearly set forth the required arrangement of information in the "Sequence Listing."

In paragraph (b)(1)(i) of this section as proposed, "specify one name per line: SURNAME comma OTHER NAMES and/or INITIALS" has been added after "applicants" to clarify the format for the presentation of the applicants name in the "Sequence Listing." similar changes have been made to name designations in paragraphs (b)(1)(vii)(A) and (b)(1)(ix)(A) as proposed.

In paragraph (b)(1)(ii) of this section as proposed, "four lines maximum" has been added to the parenthetical information to indicate that the response provided should not exceed four lines. Similar additions have been made throughout paragraph (b) of this section where the response provided may exceed the one line limitation now set forth in the preamble to paragraph (b) of this section.

In paragraph (b)(1) of this section as proposed, a new item of information has been added. This item of information relates to the number of sequences presented in the "Sequence Listing." The item is as follows: "(iii) NUMBER OF SEQUENCES (number of sequences in the "Sequence Listing" - M)." This item has been inserted after paragraph (b)(1)(ii), and paragraphs (b)(1)(iii) through (b)(1)(ix) as proposed have been redesignated as paragraphs (b)(1)(iv) through (b)(1)(x), respectively.

In paragraph (b)(1)(iii) as proposed (paragraph (b)(1)(iv) as adopted), a new information item has been added. This item relates to the addressee to which correspondence will be sent. The item is as follows: (A) ADDRESSEE (name of applicant, firm, company or institution, as may be appropriate). This item has been inserted before subheading (b)(1)(iii)(A) as proposed, and subheadings (b)(1)(iii)(A) through (E) as proposed have been redesignated accordingly.

In paragraph (b)(1)(v) as proposed (paragraph (b)(1)(vi) as adopted), "if available" has been added after "M" to indicate that the submission of current application data is mandatory only if it is available to the applicant.

In paragraphs (b)(1)(v) and (b)(1)(vi) as proposed and paragraph (b)(2)(x) as adopted, the parenthetical information provided for application and document numbers, and, filing and publication dates has been expanded to encompass Patent Cooperation Treaty applications and publications.

In paragraphs (b)(1)(v)(B), (b)(1)(vi)(C) and (b)(1)(vi)(D) as proposed, "specify as dd-MMM-yyyy" has been added after "available" to clarify the format for the presentation of date information in the "Sequence Listing." The lower case letters are employed to designate numeric responses, and the upper case letters are employed to designate alphabetical responses. As such, March 2, 1988, would be presented as 02-MAR-1988. In paragraph (b)(1)(ix)(G) as proposed (paragraph (b)(2)(x)(G) as adopted), "including month/date/year or season" has been changed to "specify as dd-MMM-yyyy, MMM-yyyy or Season-yyyy" to encompass all variations in date designations that may be encountered.

In paragraph (b)(1)(v)(C) as proposed (paragraph (b)(1)(vi)(C) as adopted), "specify each designation, left justified, within an eighteen position alpha numeric field" has been inserted after "assigned", and "to maximum of ten classification designations" has been inserted after "rep" to clarify the field length and maximum number of repetitions for the classification designations.

In paragraph (b)(1)(vi) as proposed (paragraph (b)(1)(vii) as adopted), the references to "DOCUMENT NUMBER", "document number", "document type", "PUBLICATION DATE" and "publication date" throughout this paragraph have been deleted and replaced with the appropriate references to "APPLICATION NUMBER", "application number", etc., so that the information collected in this paragraph relates only to prior applications and filing dates, not publications and publication dates. Publication information, including document numbers and publication dates, can be provided in paragraph (b)(2)(x) of this section as adopted. Further, subheading (b)(1)(vi)(B) as proposed has been deleted, and (b)(1)(vi)(A) as proposed has been clarified to include the pertinent country information. As such, subheading (b)(1)(vi)(C) has been redesignated as (b)(1)(vii)(B). Further, "specify as two letter country code and eight digit document number" has been inserted after "number.". Information regarding the manner in which PCT applications should be cited has also been added to this parenthetical. In view of the above deletion of references pertaining to publication dates, subheading (b)(1)(vi)(D) as proposed has been deleted. Further, since "PRIOR APPLICATION DATA" may repeat, the plural designations throughout the paragraph as proposed have been deleted.

Paragraph (b)(1)(ix) "PUBLICATION STATUS" as proposed has been moved to paragraph (b)(2) of this section as adopted and designated as paragraph (b)(2)(x) "PUBLICATION INFORMATION". This change permits publication information to be submitted specifically with respect to a given sequence. Further, in paragraph (b)(1)(ix) as proposed, "Have the data that are disclosed in SEQ ID NO:X been published" has been changed to "Repeat section for each relevant publication", and patent information fields have been added in the paragraph as adopted. The patent information fields are necessary to accommodate non-literature publications. Further, the format for the residue information collected in paragraph (b)(1)(ix)(H) as proposed has been changed so that this information can be collected in one line in paragraph (b)(2)(x)(K) as adopted. This last change was necessary to reduce the number of levels of information being collected so that the computer software that has been developed to manipulate the collected information can properly distinguish all of the items of information by the use of standard ASCII characters. The use of italics to designate items of information in the rules as proposed did not conform to this ASCII character requirement.

With the exception of the addition of the new item of information for "NUMBER OF SEQUENCES," all of the changes, as discussed above, to paragraph (b)(1) of this section as proposed are considered to be nonsubstantive. These changes clarify the information that is to be submitted and facilitate the collection and manipulation of the information for database purposes.

In paragraphs (b)(2)(i)(C) and (D) of this section as proposed, "both or unknown to applicant" have been added as possible responses for the items of information relating to "STRANDEDNESS" and "TOPOLOGY" in the paragraphs as adopted. These changes address the concerns that the strandedness and topology of sequences may not always be known with certainty. Further, in each of paragraphs (b)(2)(i)(C) and (D) as proposed, additional parenthetical information has been provided to clarify that strandedness and topology relate to those characteristics of the source organism molecule.

In paragraph (b)(2)(ii) as proposed, "KIND" has been changed to "MOLECULE TYPE" in the paragraph as adopted. This change corresponds to the same change made by GenBank for collecting sequence information. Further, "with subheadings, if any" has been inserted in the parenthetical because one of the molecule types that are listed has been modified to provide a subheading not previously provided for. Specifically, the subheading "(A) DESCRIPTION" has been provided for "Other nucleic acid." The molecule types listed in this paragraph as adopted differ slightly from those listed in the proposed rule. The adopted molecule types more closely correspond to the requisite controlled vocabulary currently in use in GenBank's Authorin submission program. Further, where separate alternative paragraphs (b)(2)(ii) were provided in this section as proposed for nucleotides and peptides or proteins, these separate paragraphs have been combined in the paragraph as adopted. These alternatives were considered to be unnecessary in light of the sequence type information collected in paragraph (b)(2)(i)(B) as proposed and adopted. Paragraphs (b)(2)(ii)(A), (B) and (C) as proposed have been deleted from this section of the rule as adopted. The information in paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(A) is not considered to be useful to the database and will not be collected. Paragraphs (b)(2)(ii)(B) and (C) are separately provided for in this section as adopted in paragraphs (b)(2)(v) and (b)(2)(iii), respectively.

New paragraphs (b)(2)(iii), (b)(2)(iv) and (b)(2)(v) have been provided in this section as adopted. Paragraph (b)(2)(iii) "HYPOTHETICAL (yes/no - R)" has been provided as a separate paragraph in this section as adopted because all of the molecule types in paragraph (b)(2)(ii) could be hypothetical, not just those previously designated as hypothetical. Paragraph (b)(2)(iv) "ANTI-SENSE (yes/no - R)" has been added to accommodate an emerging trend in the technology. Paragraph (b)(2)(v) "FRAGMENT TYPE ..." has been added as a separate paragraph in this section as adopted, whereas it was collected as an item of information under paragraph (b)(2)(ii) "KIND" in this paragraph as proposed, in order to clearly delineate "KIND" or "MOLECULE TYPE" information from other unrelated items of information such as "FRAGMENT TYPE."

Further, in paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(B) as proposed (paragraph (b)(2)(v) as adopted), the "FRAGMENT TYPE" responses have been changed to clearly indicate that fragments are indeed intended by each response. As such, "N-terminal" and "C-terminal" are, in the paragraph as adopted, "N-terminal fragment" and "C-terminal fragment."

Paragraphs (b)(2)(iii)(A) through (C) as proposed will not be collected separately. Rather, in the rule as adopted, paragraph (b)(2)(vi)(A) will collect this information in "ORGANISM (scientific name of source organism)."

In paragraph (b)(2)(iii)(F) as proposed (paragraph (b)(2)(vi)(D) as adopted), the parenthetical has been expanded to incorporate the subheadings "(1) GERM LINE" and "(2) REARRANGED", and those subheadings have been deleted. This change was necessary to reduce the number of levels of information being collected so that the computer software that has been developed to manipulate the collected information can properly distinguish all of the items of information by the use of standard ASCII characters. The use of italics to designate items of information in the rules as proposed did not conform to this ASCII character requirement.

In paragraph (b)(2)(vi) as adopted (paragraph (b)(2)(iii) as proposed), "CELL LINE" and "ORGANELLE" have been added as paragraphs (b)(2)(vi)(H) and (I), respectively. These items of information were collected in paragraphs (b)(2)(iv)(A) and (b)(2)(ii), respectively, as proposed. It is considered that these items of information are more properly collected under the "ORIGINAL SOURCE" heading.

In paragraph (b)(2)(iv) as proposed, paragraph (b)(2)(iv)(A) has been deleted in view of its addition to paragraph (b)(2)(vi) as adopted.

Paragraph (b)(2)(vi) as proposed has been deleted and the corresponding information will be collected in the "FEATURE" information in paragraph (b)(2)(ix)(D) "OTHER INFORMATION." It is considered that these items of information are more properly collected under the "FEATURE" heading.

In paragraph (b)(2)(vii) as proposed (paragraph (b)(2)(ix) as adopted), "FEATURES" has been changed to "FEATURE" to indicate that one feature at a time is, in fact, being described, although multiple features may be described by virtue of repeating the field. Further, a new subheading "(A) NAME/KEY (provide appropriate identifier for feature):" has been added to the paragraph as adopted, and the remaining subparagraphs have been redesignated. This new subheading is necessary so that information relating to feature identifiers is positively requested and can, as such, be searched as a separate field. In this paragraph, the parenthetical for the subheading "LOCATION" has been expanded to encompass the information collected in the now deleted subheading "COMPLEMENT." Further, it is now explicitly stated that the location should be specified in accordance with the syntax of the DDBJ/EMBL/GenBank Feature Table Definition. This is the syntax that has been jointly developed by the three major sequence databases in Japan, Europe and the United States. As set forth above, a new subheading "(D) OTHER INFORMATION" has been added to collect the information collected in the now deleted paragraph (b)(2)(vi).

Section 1.824:

In paragraph (a) of this section as proposed, the phrase "required by § 1.821(e)" has been added after the terms "computer readable form" to provide a cross-reference to the section of the rules that requires the submission of the computer readable form.

In paragraph (b) of this section as proposed, the erroneous reference to "National" has been deleted in the paragraph as adopted.

In paragraph (d) of this section as proposed, the two sentences have been combined into a single sentence in the paragraph as adopted. This change is considered to be editorial in nature. No change in substance is intended.

In paragraph (f) of this section as proposed, the preamble has been changed to reiterate the fact that any means may be used to create the computer readable form as long as the conditions set forth in this paragraph are satisfied. Further, in order to clarify the tape requirements in this paragraph, the magnetic tape specification has been deleted from paragraph (f)(1) and a new paragraph (f)(4) has been added solely directed to magnetic tapes.

In paragraph (f)(2) as proposed, the spelling of "Xenix" has been corrected, the references to "Unix" or "System V" have been deleted, and the erroneous "LPR" designation has been changed to "lpr" in the paragraph as adopted.

In paragraph (f)(3) as proposed, a new media format has been inserted in the paragraph as adopted to accommodate the high capacity diskettes now available for the Apple Macintosh system. This new format is a "3.50 inch, 1.4 Mb storage" diskette.

In paragraph (h) as proposed, the word "phase" in the last sentence has been changed to "stage" in the paragraph as adopted to properly track the terminology currently in use in other sections of 37 CFR.

Section 1.825:

In paragraph (a) as proposed, a parenthetical cross-reference to the section and paragraph of these rules that establishes the requirement for the submission of the paper copy of the "Sequence Listing" has been provided in the paragraph as adopted.

In paragraph (b) as proposed, a parenthetical cross-reference to the section and paragraph of these rules that establishes the requirement for the submission of the computer readable form has been provided in the paragraph as adopted.

In paragraph (c) as proposed, the phrase "an application after the grant of a patent thereon" has been changed to "a patent, e.g., by reason of reissue or certificate of correction," to more properly state that patents, not applications, are the subject of the corrections referenced in the paragraph as adopted.

Response to and Analysis of Comments

Written comments from thirteen (13) sources were received in response to the notice of proposed rulemaking. Some suggestions made in the comments have been adopted as presented or in modified form, and others have not been adopted. A detailed analysis of the comments follows. There was no oral testimony presented at the public hearing conducted on July 12, 1989.

Comment: Two comments questioned the authority of the PTO to impose these regulations. The comments alleged that computer readable forms are not "in writing" as required by 35 U.S.C. 111, and that the rules represent a fundamental revision of 35 U.S.C. 111, 112, and 113, and cannot be reconciled with the requirements of law.

Response: 35 U.S.C. 6 gives the Commissioner the authority to establish regulations "not inconsistent with law." These rules require sequences to be submitted "in writing" as specified under 35 U.S.C. § 111. The additional requirement of the submission of a computer readable form is not inconsistent with 111. The rules do not alter, in any way, the requirements of 35 U.S.C. 112 and 35 U.S.C. 113.

Comment: One comment stated that the rules will have a significant impact on how the claims or disclosures will be interpreted. Further, it was stated that the rules preclude the applicant from being his/her own lexicographer.

Response: As stated above, the rules do not alter, in any way, the requirements of 35 U.S.C. 112. There will be no change in disclosure and/or claiming requirements after the implementation of the rules. The use of sequence identification numbers (SEQ ID No:X) only provides a shorthand way for applicants to claim their inventions. These identification numbers do not in any way restrict the manner in which an invention can be claimed.

Comment: One comment questioned the validity of requiring applicants to ensure that there is no added matter upon amendment, which until now had been the responsibility of the PTO.

Response: This is not the first instance in which the applicant is required to ensure that there is no new matter upon amendment. The requirement is analogous to that found in 37 C.F.R. § 1.125 regarding substitute specifications. When a substitute specification is required because the number or nature of amendments would make it difficult to examine the case, the applicant must include a statement that the substitute specification includes no new matter. The necessity of requiring a substitute "Sequence Listing" upon amendment is similar to the necessity of requiring a substitute specification and, likewise, the burden is on the applicant to ensure that no new matter is added. Applicants have a duty to comply with the statutory prohibition (35 U.S.C. 132 and 251) against the introduction of new matter.

Comment: Two comments recommended that the standardized format not be made mandatory, but optional, or a less rigid code should be adopted.

Response: The stated purpose and usefulness of these rules depends upon and requires that the resultant database be accurate, uniform and complete. The Office has determined that mandatory compliance with a single standardized format is the most efficient way of accomplishing this goal.

Comment: Four comments suggested that the proposed effective date of January 1, 1990, be postponed. The Authorin program should be available and in use. There should be a longer transition period where the standardized format serves as a guideline rather than a mandatory rule.

Response: As noted above, the effective date of the rules has been postponed. There will be a testing period after the publication but prior to the effective date of these final rules in which applicants may elect to participate on a voluntary basis.

Comment: Three comments were made to the effect that the PTO, the JPO, and the EPO should come to an agreement regarding a uniform standardized format among the three offices.

Response: The final rules are consistent with the harmonization that has been achieved among the EPO, the JPO and the PTO relating to the presentation and exchange of sequence data.

Comment: One comment expressed concern that the lack of inter-linkage with other major gene banks would cause more work and confusion rather than less.

Response: The PTO has consulted with the existing U.S. nucleotide and peptide and protein sequence data libraries during the development of the final rules presented herein. The EPO has also consulted with the major European sequence data libraries. It should also be noted that the existing nucleotide and peptide and protein sequence data libraries in the U.S., Europe and Japan have implemented regular exchanges of sequence data.

Comment: Two comments discussed differences between the proposed standard format and that of publication databases, and pointed out the difficulty to applicants in changing the way they currently submit sequence data. The comments alleged that the proposed rules indicate that the standardized format is similar to the GenBank format when, in fact, they are quite different. Also, the rules require separate listings for sequences derived from a single sequence, whereas publication databases do not.

Response: The standardized format is as close to the GenBank format as the Office could come while accommodating the special requirements of patent applications. Many applicants will have to change the way they currently submit sequence data in patent applications, but it will be a one-time change. The benefits to both the applicants and the PTO in terms of improved search capability and higher quality patents should more than compensate for any initial burden that may be experienced by some applicants. Further, GenBank is working with the PTO to produce software that will easily convert the standard GenBank presentation for nucleotides and the standard PIR presentation for peptides to the required PTO submission format. The PTO will make this modified program available to the public.

Comment: One comment questioned whether a DNA or amino acid sequence could still be part of a figure in a patent application, or whether it must be referred to in the format "SEQ ID NO."

Response: Any sequence may still be shown in a figure. Indeed, many significant sequence features may only be demonstrated by a figure. This is especially true in view of the fact that the representation of double stranded nucleotides is not permitted, according to the final rules, in the "Sequence Listing," and many significant nucleotide features, such as "sticky ends" and the like, will only be shown effectively by reference to a drawing figure. Similarly, drawing figures are recommended for use with amino acid sequences to depict structural features of the corresponding protein, such as finger regions and Kringle regions.

Comment: Two comments expressed concern over the need for all applicants to have access to the necessary computer equipment and programs.

Response: To facilitate compliance with the rules, the PTO will make a modified Authorin data input program available to all applicants for the cost of the media. Those applicants for whom compliance with the rules remains a significant hardship may petition for a waiver of the rules. See 37 CFR § 1.183.

Comment: Three comments questioned the use of a format which had advantages for production of a "hard copy" document, but would have to be reformatted for database storage and sequence searching. Separate "clean" listings of each nucleic acid and amino acid sequence were recommended.

Response: The software that has been developed for the purpose of the PTO's sequence database readily parses the requisite sequence information from the sequence data that has been formatted primarily for visual presentation and review.

Comment: Two comments stated that the "Recommended" and "Optional" information was unnecessary in identifying the sequence with particularity, would be provided elsewhere in the application and should be eliminated from the rules.

Response: The "Recommended" and "Optional" information has been retained for the purpose of developing, to the extent possible, the most comprehensive database possible for the purpose of searching applications containing sequence data. The "Recommended" and "Optional" information items constitute text database fields that will be text searchable by the search program that will be used by the PTO examiners. While this textual information may be available elsewhere in a given application, it would not be included in a sequence database and thus would not be searchable in the database if it is not included in the "Sequence Listing" and the computer readable copy of the "Sequence Listing."

Comment: Two comments suggested that the PTO train two or three clerks to convert computerized sequence data to the requested format. The comment further stated that it would be easier and cheaper for a clerk to learn to work the software and then use it every day, than to expect inventors and attorneys to relearn the system each time they file an application disclosing a sequence as herein defined.

Response: Conversion at the PTO would involve an unnecessary duplication of effort and would increase the opportunities for the introduction of errors into the database. It is not the intent of the PTO to convert data except in some, as yet unidentified, very exceptional circumstances. The service suggested in the comment can be met appropriately in the private sector.

Comment: Three comments said that the minimum thresholds for sequence length set out by § 1.821(a) were too low, encompassing amino acid sequences which are easily searchable without computer assistance and incidental nucleotide sequences, such as linkers, which are of no value to a PTO database.

Response: The minimum thresholds have been established for the purpose of developing a database that will facilitate computerized searching for both lengthy and relatively shorter sequences. The limit of four or more amino acids has been established for consistency with limits in place for industry database collections, whereas the limit of ten or more nucleotides, while lower than certain industry database limits, has been established to encompass those nucleotide sequences to which the shortest probe will bind in a stable manner. To raise the lower limit for amino acids to, for example, five amino acids, immediately illustrates the problems associated with higher thresholds. With a limit of five amino acids there would be 20⁵ (160,000) possible combinations below this higher threshold versus 20³ (8000) or fewer possible combinations below the current threshold. This difference in the number of possible combinations is significant, and plays an important role in effectively searching the applications under consideration.

Comment: Two comments recommended that sequences incidental to the invention not be subject to the rules, and that only claimed sequences be required to be listed. One comment stated that the requirements should not be limited to claimed sequences.

Response: Any disclosed sequence, whether claimed or not, is relevant for the purpose of assessing the prior art. Therefore, it is essential that all sequences, whether only disclosed or also claimed, be included in the PTO database.

Comment: Two comments suggested that sequences included as prior art not be subject to the rules.

Response: In many instances, prior art sequences may generally be referred to by name and a publication reference; in these situations, they need not be listed as part of the "Sequence Listing." However, if recitation of the sequence, i.e., as a string of particular bases or amino acids, is necessary to a discussion of these prior art sequences, it is required that these sequences be included in the "Sequence Listing" for examination purposes.

Comment: One comment inquired as to whether functionally defined sequences could be referred to by function or whether they must be listed.

Response: Any sequence that is disclosed as a sequence, i.e., as a string of particular bases or amino acids, and that otherwise meets the criteria of § 1.821(a), must be set forth as part of the "Sequence Listing." However, a sequence that is referred to only by function need not be listed.

Comment: One comment raised the question of how to deal with variations on listed sequences such as the following: Example (1) allelic variations or "conservatively modified variants thereof," and Example (2) where the sequence "may be deleted at the C-terminus by 1, 2, 3, 4, or 5 residues."

Response: The rules do not encompass the variations listed in Examples (1) or (2). In Example (1), the sequences may be described as SEQ ID NO:X and "conservatively modified variants thereof" or allelic variations, if desired. A situation such as that in Example (2), if encompassed by the rules, would introduce far too much complexity into the "Sequence Listings" and the searching database that is currently envisioned. The possible mathematical variations that result from this type of language could reasonably require a "Sequence Listing" that would be thousands of pages in length. In Example (2), only the undelimited sequence needs to be included in the "Sequence Listing," and the sequences may be described as SEQ ID NO:X from which deletions have been made at the C-terminus by 1, 2, 3, 4 or 5 residues. The sequence search database will only contain the undelimited sequence.

Comment: Two comments inquired as to the criteria the PTO would use to determine compliance, and what opportunities would be afforded the applicant to satisfy the regulations. One comment also stated that abandonment is an unduly harsh penalty for failure to comply with the rules.

Response: Applicants will be notified of easily detectable deficiencies early in the application process. Deficiencies of a more sophisticated nature will likely only be detected by the examiner to whom the application is assigned. Applicants whose computer readable forms are damaged in the mail, are not readable, or are missing mandatory elements will be so notified shortly after receipt of the application by the PTO. Other errors or inconsistencies will be noted by the examiner early in the examination process. Upon detection of damage or a deficiency, a notice will be sent to the applicant detailing the damage or deficiency and setting a one month period for response. Extensions of time in which to reply will be available pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136. When an action by the applicant, such as a response to a notice to comply from the PTO, is determined to be a bona fide attempt to comply with the rules and it is apparent that compliance with some requirement has inadvertently been omitted, the opportunity to explain and supply the omission will be given before the question of abandonment will be considered. See 37 CFR § 1.135(c).

Comment: Two comments questioned the legal significance of sequences in the description which differ from those in the "Sequence Listing."

Response: There should not be many instances where differences occur since sequences which are listed in the "Sequence Listing" should be referred to by the assigned SEQ ID NO within the text of the description and claims. A sequence may be listed as part of a figure which may differ from that listed in the "Sequence Listing." In that case, the rules represent no change from current practice regarding inconsistencies within an application.

Comment: One comment expressed concern over the likelihood of error when referring to a sequence by ID number and the consequences to the applicant of such an error.

Response: There is the possibility that errors will occur. However, referring to sequences by ID number should prove to be less prone to error than actually repeatedly reproducing the sequences.

Comment: One comment suggested that the PTO furnish the applicant with a paper copy of the data as it appears in the PTO's database so that the applicant may ensure that no errors arose in the data transferal.

Response: The PTO will undertake the furnishing of such paper copies after the implementation date of the rules. However, the necessity of continuing this procedure indefinitely will be reviewed once the integrity of the system has been established.

Comment: One comment stated that either the paper copy or the computer readable copy of the "Sequence Listing" must not be correctable by reference to the other. The PTO should clearly state the policy, and needs the right to require (not just "permit") correction of one copy where there are discrepancies.

Response: As set forth in § 1.821(e), the paper copy of the "Sequence Listing" will serve as the official copy of the "Sequence Listing" for the purposes of the patent application file. The PTO would like to permit correction of the paper copy, at the least, during the pendency of a given application by reference to the computer readable copy thereof if both the paper and computer readable forms were submitted at the time of filing of the application and the totality of the circumstances otherwise substantiates the proposed correction. A mere discrepancy between the paper copy and the computer readable form may not, in and of itself, be sufficient to justify a proposed correction.

Comment: One comment said that if the paper copy is the official copy for priority purposes, it should be corrected (if necessary) within about nine months of the filing date in order to be used for filing under the Paris Convention.

Response: This comment is noted, but compliance with the recommended timing is, of course, contingent upon the discovery of inconsistencies within the Paris Convention priority period. It is expected that some, but certainly not all, discrepancies will be discovered within the priority period. The PTO cannot guarantee that all discrepancies in any part of an application will be discovered within the priority period.

Comment: One comment noted that although the PTO may not consider the computer readable copy to be part of the file wrapper for U.S. application purposes, the possible effect of this additional disclosure on foreign filings based upon the original filing document of the U.S. application has not been addressed or explained.

Response: The rules explicitly state that the computer readable form is merely a copy of the "Sequence Listing," and that the computer readable form will not necessarily be retained as a part of the application file. Section 1.821(e). A certified copy of a U.S. application that is obtained for the purpose of foreign filing will not include any information in computer readable form. However, it will include a copy of the "Sequence Listing." There should be no additional disclosure in the computer readable form relative to the "Sequence Listing." Section 1.821(f) clearly requires a statement that the content of the two is the same must be submitted. These sections were drafted with the foreign priority considerations in mind.

Comment: One comment recommended that the PTO state that an applicant will (rather than "may") be given the opportunity to meet the regulations when a bona fide attempt to comply has been made, but when some item has inadvertently been omitted.

Response: The grant of this further opportunity to comply is dependent upon the nature of the deficiency and the response received in attempt to cure the deficiency. If it is evident that a bona fide attempt to comply has been made, the opportunity to explain and supply the omission will be given before the question of abandonment is considered. No change to existing practice regarding inadvertent omissions is intended or contemplated. See 37 CFR § 1.135(c).

Comment: Two comments asked what an applicant should do, in view of the rule prohibiting the addition of new matter, if an error in sequencing were discovered after filing an application.

Response: The treatment accorded errors in sequencing will be no different after the implementation date of these rules than that currently accorded errors in sequencing or any other errors that are made in describing the invention in the application as originally filed.

Comment: One comment recommended that applicants not be required to submit additional computer readable copies of the "Sequence Listing" when filing a derivative application (continuation, continuation-in-part, or divisional).

Response: Additional computer readable forms will not be required in derivative or continuing applications if the sequence information is exactly the same as that in a parent application in which a complying computer readable form had been filed. In such situations, applicants must request that the previously submitted computer readable form, or the data thereon, be used in a subsequently filed application in much the same manner as applicants must now request the transfer of drawings in derivative or continuing applications. Section 1.821(e) now explicitly provides for this practice.

Comment: Four comments said the estimate that the proposed rule change would require only an additional 15 minutes was highly unrealistic. One comment noted that the time required to key in all the information other than the sequence data was less than one hour.

Response: The estimated time of approximately fifteen minutes for complying with these rules should not be interpreted as the amount of time necessary to formulate a "Sequence Listing" submission. Rather, the estimated time only relates to the additional amount of time applicants will have to expend to comply with these rules over and above that which they would have expended previously for patent applications. It is submitted that compliance with these rules will involve only the additional submission of relevant application and computer readable form information and a minor, one-time, revision of the format for presenting sequence data, after which no additional expenditure of time for format compliance will be necessary. The time required to submit sequence and any associated information is not included in the above estimate because it is properly assumed that this information would necessarily have been submitted, though possibly in a different format, in applications filed prior to the effective date of these rules.

Comment: One comment asked whether on-line access to the PTO database would be available to the public.

Response: On-line access to the PTO database is not immediately envisioned. The PTO does plan to disseminate the patented or published portion of the database by making the information available to the public.

Comment: Two comments asked whether adequate security measures would be taken to insure that diskettes are properly identified before separation from their files.

Response: Adequate measures will be taken to insure that computer readable forms are properly identified before separation from their files. The labeling procedures required by § 1.825(h) of these final rules should minimize any identification problems.

Comment: One comment asked how the PTO intended to dispose of the disks to insure the secrecy of their contents.

Response: The secrecy of the computer readable forms will be maintained in much the same manner as the secrecy of applications is currently maintained. If computer readable forms are disposed of by the PTO, they will be disposed of in a manner that will preserve the secrecy of their contents.

Comment: One comment recommended that all sequence data meeting the minimum length criteria be routinely subject to the rules, and that a petition should be required when an applicant believes particular sequences are exempt as per 37 CFR 1.821(a).

Response: The suggestion cannot be adopted because the PTO has the burden to establish a lack of compliance with the rules, and the suggested practice would have the effect of placing the burden of establishing the need for compliance with applicants. The burden of proof does not shift to the applicant until the PTO has established a prima facie case of noncompliance.

Comment: One comment suggested that the definition of nucleotide sequences be narrowed to exclude polymers containing other than typical 5' to 3' phosphodiester linkages.

Response: The rules have been drafted so as not to exclude the types of sequences that are specifically referred to. The PTO does not want to exclude linkages of the type commonly found in naturally occurring nucleotides, e.g., eukaryotic end capped sequences.

Comment: One comment suggested that the applicability of the rules is overbroad and ambiguous. It was stated that it was unclear whether a single non-peptidyl linkage removes a peptide from applicability.

Response: Every effort has been made to eliminate ambiguity from the rules. The rules are, nonetheless, procedurally and technologically complex. They must be carefully reviewed in order to gain a comprehensive understanding of them. With regard to the specific question that has been posed, § 1.821(a)(2) was changed to address the point in question. A single non-peptidyl bond does not exclude a given peptide from the scope of the rule.

Comment: Three comments recommended that the depiction of unusual or modified bases and amino acids should be clarified. One of these comments suggested specific language for clarification. The suggested language is as follows:

A modified base or amino acid may be presented in a given sequence as the corresponding unmodified base or amino acid if the modified base or amino acid is one of those listed in paragraphs (p)(1) or (p)(2) of this section and the modification is also set forth elsewhere in the Sequence Listing (for example, FEATURES § 1.823(b)(2)(ix)). Otherwise, all bases or amino acids not appearing in paragraphs (b)(1) or (b)(2) of this section shall be listed in a given sequence as "N" or "Xaa," respectively, with further information, as appropriate, given elsewhere in the Sequence Listing.

Response: The suggested language has been adopted in § 1.822(b) of the final rule.

Comment: One comment asked that the PTO explicitly state that the rules do not apply to applications that are pending at the time of the rule change.

Response: Only new applications filed after the effective date of the rule change will be subject to the rules; applications which are pending at that time are exempt. Compliance with the rules, on a voluntary basis, is encouraged for applications filed prior to the effective date of these final rules. The final rules will not apply, except on a voluntary basis, to continuation or divisional applications filed after the effective date unless the application upon which 35 U.S.C. 120 priority is claimed was also subject to these rules. The final rules will apply to continuation-in-part applications filed after the effective date where the application upon which 35 U.S.C. 120 priority is claimed was subject to these rules or where the material that is newly added in the continuation-in-part includes sequence information that falls within the requirements of these rules. The final rules will not apply to reissue or reexamination applications filed after the effective date unless the application which matured into the patent sought to be reissued or reexamined was subject to these rules.

Comment: One comment asked whether it would be acceptable for the inventor or the person who actually compares sequence data to sign the statement that the "Sequence Listing" conforms to the computer readable form.

Response: A statement submitted by either of those persons is acceptable as long as it is a verified statement. Any person registered to practice before the PTO may make such a statement, and it does not need to be verified. The statement may be made by any person not registered to practice before the PTO if the statement is a verified statement, i.e., in oath or declaration form.

Comment: Three comments said that the time limits set for compliance in § 1.821(g) were too short and should be extended.

Response: The time limits set are considered reasonable, and those set in § 1.821(g) are extendable pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136.

Comment: One comment noted that the requirement to indicate coding regions of a nucleic acid sequence may be inappropriate.

Response: There has been a misunderstanding of the requirements relating to the depiction of the coding regions in nucleotide sequences as well as the amino acids corresponding to the codons in those coding regions. It should be noted that the rules do not, in any way, require the depiction of coding regions or the amino acids corresponding to the codons in those coding regions. Paragraph (d) of § 1.822 only requires that where amino acids corresponding to the codons in the coding parts of a nucleotide sequence are depicted, they must be depicted below the corresponding codons. (Emphasis added.) There is absolutely no requirement in the rules to depict coding regions. Nor is there a requirement to separately list the amino acid sequence unless the applicant desires to discuss the amino acids as a separate sequence. That is, when the coding parts of a nucleotide sequence and their corresponding amino acids have been identified, if applicant desires to discuss those amino acids in the coding parts of the nucleotide as a separate sequence, those amino acids must also be set forth as a separate sequence. These requirements do not alter, in any way, the requirements of 35 U.S.C. 112. The separate submission of the amino acid sequence that corresponds to the coding parts of a nucleotide sequence is, however, recommended and encouraged because the amino acid sequence may not be captured in the sequence database if it is only presented in the mixed-mode format.

Comment: One comment noted that the requirement to list nucleotide coding regions as groupings of codons becomes redundant when the same sequence must be listed for each reading frame, and may be irrational for those circumstances where a single base insertion or deletion causes a change in the reading frame.

Response: As noted above, there is no requirement in the rules to depict coding regions of nucleotides. However, when an applicant does elect to depict coding regions, the rules require that they be depicted in a uniform manner.

Comment: One comment noted that the term "mature protein" should be better defined. The requirement to number amino acids based on the determination of the mature protein is unnecessary and could lead to litigation problems. Further, the designation of pre- and pro- sequences may be impossible and is irrelevant to the search.

Response: Section 1.822(m) of the rules as adopted sets forth a procedure for numbering amino acid sequences that is an alternative to the procedure involving the identification of the mature protein. Sequences can either be numbered based upon the identification of the mature protein or based upon the first amino acid at the amino terminal as number 1.

Comment: Two comments noted that the rules did not provide for the depiction of codons that span intron/exon junctions.

Response: The rules as adopted now provide for the depiction of codons that span intron/exon junctions in § 1.822(d).

Comment: One comment asked how to represent regions where two proteins are coded on opposite strands of DNA and overlap.

Response: Since the final rules do not permit the representation of double stranded nucleotides, each DNA strand must be listed separately. In this situation, each DNA strand may be listed with its corresponding amino acid sequence, and the relationship between the two may be shown in a drawing figure.

Comment: One comment noted that the rules do not provide for the representation of differentially spliced gene sequences which lead to the expression of two different amino acid sequences from a single gene or RNA.

Response: The rules do not contemplate the depiction of more than one amino acid sequence together with a single nucleotide sequence. Therefore, a differentially spliced nucleic acid sequence requires separate listings. The information may be represented by separate listings for each sequence, i.e., one nucleotide sequence and two amino acid sequences, or by listing the nucleic acid sequence twice, once with each of the different amino acid sequences. The relationship between them may also be shown in a drawing figure.

Comment: One comment recommended that applicants have the option of presenting the amino acid sequence in the one-letter form.

Response: The use of the three-letter code in the "Sequence Listing" is preferred for ease of examination. However, the modified Authorin program allows applicants to input amino acid sequences using one-letter codes or three letter codes, and will convert, where necessary, one-letter codes to the appropriate three-letter codes for the "Sequence Listing."

Comment: One comment suggested that the wording of § 1.822(p), regarding the presentation of partial sequences, subsequences and discontinuous sequences, be clarified.

Response: This language has been clarified, and can be found in § 1.822(o) as adopted.

Comment: One comment noted that there are no known naturally occurring circular amino acid sequences and that § 1.822(o) need not distinguish between circular and linear polypeptide sequences.

Response: Section 1.822(o) as proposed is now set forth in § 1.822(n) as adopted. Sequences in patent applications are not limited to those that occur naturally. Synthetic sequences are encompassed by the rules.

Comment: Three comments recommended that the PTO state explicitly that the applicant will in no way be held liable for omissions of optional or recommended items, and that the PTO would make no interpretations therefrom.

Response: The suggestion has been adopted in § 1.821(i) of the rules.

Comment: One comment recommended that the number of sequences presented in the "Sequence Listing" be included under the GENERAL INFORMATION section as a check for completeness during application processing.

Response: The suggestion has been adopted in § 1.823(b)(1)(iii) of the rules.

Comment: One comment mentioned that it was confusing to describe the items CURRENT APPLICATION DATA and PRIOR APPLICATION DATA as mandatory while saying that they are to be omitted if the information is unknown or inapplicable.

Response: The requirement for this information is similar to that currently set forth in 37 CFR 1.5. Each of the above items of information must be submitted if they are known to applicant or applicable in a given application, respectively.

Comment: One comment suggested that the PUBLICATION STATUS section be revised to accommodate patent citations.

Response: The suggestion has been adopted in § 1.823(b)(2)(x).

Comment: One comment said that the many levels of identifiers and sub-identifiers introduced unnecessary complexity.

Response: The items of information in § 1.823 have been reviewed and several levels of identifiers and sub-identifiers have been deleted.

Comment: One comment recommended that § 1.823(b)(1)(ix) not include the items BASE PAIRS and AMINO ACIDS since that information would be known from the kind of sequence listed.

Response: The suggestion has been adopted in § 1.823(b)(2)(x) of the rules.

Comment: One comment suggested that § 1.823(b)(2)(i) include "Not known to applicant" as a valid response to TOPOL-OGY and STRANDEDNESS items.

Response: The suggestion has been adopted in § 1.823(b)(2)(i).

Comment: One comment suggested that "anti-sense DNA" and "anti-sense RNA" be added as a valid response under KIND in § 1.823(b)(2)(ii).

Response: A separate information item has been provided for molecule types that have anti-sense characteristics. It is in § 1.823(b)(2)(iv) as adopted.

Comment: One comment said that "Specific Organelle" was not a proper response to KIND, but was a sub-identifier under "Organelle DNA" and "Organelle RNA."

Response: All organelle information will be collected in § 1.823(b)(2)(vi)(1) as adopted.

Comment: One comment recommended that the heading KIND be used only once and the "Peptide or protein" information be listed under that single heading.

Response: The suggestion has been adopted in § 1.823(b)(2)(ii).

Comment: One comment suggested that "Whole" be included as a proper response to Peptide or protein FRAGMENT TYPE.

Response: This suggestion has not been adopted because it is presumed that no response will be given for FRAGMENT TYPE if the sequence is "Whole."

Comment: One comment suggested that NAME be added as a sub-identifier under the FEATURES section.

Response: The suggestion has been adopted in § 1.823(b)(2)(ix)(A).

Comment: One comment suggested that § 1.824(f) be modified to include 1/4" tape cartridge as an acceptable magnetic medium. One comment suggested that computer readable forms produced by Digital Equipment Corporation (DEC) systems be acceptable.

Response: These suggestions have not been adopted. The initially acceptable computer readable forms and computer systems are limited to those set forth in § 1.824(a) and (f), respectively. It should be noted that any computer operating system may be utilized to produce a sequence submission, provided that the system is capable of producing a file having the characteristics specified in § 1.824 and capable of writing the properly formatted file to one of the acceptable diskettes or tapes.

Comment: One comment suggested that the PTO accept any computer readable form which is acceptable to the EPO or JPO.

Response: It is likely that, with the exception of the EPO's acceptance of optical character readable documents, the PTO will be more liberal than both the EPO and the JPO with regard to acceptable computer readable forms. The JPO will not accept any computer readable forms.

Comment: One comment recommended that where a yes/no response is desired for an item of information, it should be indicated in the parenthetical information following that item.

Response: The suggestion has been adopted throughout § 1.823(b) of the rules.

Comment: One comment suggested that a provision be made to allow a sequence listing to be the figure published in the Official Gazette at issuance.

Response: The PTO is exploring the feasibility of adopting this suggestion. If adopted, the Manual of Patent Examining Procedure will be revised to accommodate this suggestion.

Discussion of Specific Sections

Nucleotide and/or amino acid sequence disclosures in patent applications. (Section 1.821)

Section 1.821(a) presents a definition for "nucleotide and/or amino acid sequences." This definition sets forth limits, in terms of numbers of amino acids and/or numbers of nucleotides, at or above which compliance with the rules that follow is required. Further, compliance with the rules is only required for unbranched sequences. Branched sequences are specifically excluded from the scope of the rules. The limit of four or more amino acids has been established herein for consistency with limits in place for industry database collections whereas the limit of ten or more nucleotides, while lower than certain industry database limits, has been established to encompass those nucleotide sequences to which the smallest probe will bind in a stable manner. Specifically, the amino acid limit is consistent with the limits in place in industry database collections, such as the National Biomedical Research Foundation Protein Identification Resource (NBRF-PIR; Washington, D.C.) database and the International Protein Information Database in Japan (JIPID; Tokyo). NBRF-PIR may include sequences having fewer than four amino acids but this is considered by the PTO to be too low because amino acid sequences with three amino acids can readily be manually searched as chemical structures rather than as sequences of the type to be submitted under these rules. The limits for amino acids and nucleotides are also consistent with those established for sequence data exchange with the JPO and the EPO.

Sections 1.821(a)(1) and 1.821(a)(2) present further definitions for those nucleotide and amino acid sequences that are intended to be embraced by the rules that follow. Nucleotide sequences are further limited to those that can be represented by the symbols set forth in § 1.822(b)(1). Amino acid sequences are further limited to those listed in § 1.822(b)(2) and those L-amino acids that are commonly found in naturally occurring proteins. The limitation to L-amino acids is based upon the fact that there currently exists no widely accepted standard nomenclature for representing the scope of amino acids encompassed by non-L-amino acids, and, as such, the process of meaningfully encoding these other amino acids for computerized searching and printing is not currently feasible. The previous limitation that "[o]nly peptides or proteins containing normal peptide bonds are embraced" by the rule has been deleted from the final rules in favor of a more liberal standard that states that the rules embrace "[a]ny peptide or protein that can be expressed as a sequence using the symbols in § 1.822(b)(2) in conjunction with a description elsewhere in the 'Sequence Listing' to describe, e.g., modified linkages, cross links, end caps, non-peptidyl bonds, etc." The use of the terms "peptide or protein" implies, however, that the amino acids in a given sequence are linked by at least three consecutive peptide bonds. Accordingly, an amino acid sequence will not be excluded from the scope of the rules merely due to the presence of a single non-peptidyl bond. If an amino acid sequence can be represented by a string of amino acid abbreviations, with reference, where necessary, to a features table to explain modifications in the sequence, the sequence comes within the scope of the rules. However, the rules are not intended to encompass the subject matter that is generally referred to as synthetic resins.

Section 1.821(b) requires exclusive conformance, with regard to the manner in which the nucleotide and/or amino acid sequences are presented and described, with the rules that follow for all applications that include nucleotide and amino acid sequences that fall within the above definitions. This requirement is necessary to minimize any confusion that could result if more than one format for representing sequence data was employed in a given application. It is also expected that the preferred standard format will be more readily and widely accepted and adopted if its use is exclusive, as well as mandatory.

Section 1.821(c) requires that applications containing nucleotide and/or amino acid sequences that fall within the above definitions, contain, as a separate part of the disclosure on paper copy, a disclosure of the nucleotide and/or amino acid sequences, and associated information, using the format and symbols that are set forth in §§ 1.822 and 1.823. This separate part of the disclosure on paper copy will be referred to as the "Sequence Listing," and requires that each sequence disclosed in the application appear separately in the "Sequence Listing," with each sequence further being assigned a sequence identification number, referred to as "SEQ ID NO." A plurality of sequences may, if feasible, be presented on a single page, and this may be extended to the separate presentation of both nucleotide and amino acid sequences on the same page. The requirement for sequence identification numbers, at a minimum, requires that each sequence be assigned a different number for purposes of identification. However, where practical and for ease of reference, sequences should be presented in the separate part of the application in numerical order.

Section 1.821(d) requires the use of the assigned sequence identifier in all instances where the description or claims of a patent application discuss sequences regardless of whether a given sequence is also embedded in the text of the description or claims of an application. This requirement is also intended to permit references, in both the description and claims, to sequences set forth in the "Sequence Listing" by the use of assigned sequence identifiers without repeating the sequence in the text of the description or claims.

Section 1.821(e) requires the submission of a copy of the "Sequence Listing" in computer readable form. The computer readable form will be used by the PTO to establish a database for searching and printing nucleotide and amino acid sequences. This electronic database will also enable the PTO to exchange patented sequence data, in electronic form, with the JPO and the EPO. It should be noted that the PTO's database will comply with the confidentiality requirement imposed by 35 U.S.C. 122. That is, the PTO will not exchange or make public any information on any sequence until the patent application containing that information matures into a patent.

The second sentence of § 1.821(e) indicates that, as between the paper copy of the "Sequence Listing" and the computer readable copy thereof, the paper copy would serve as the official copy. However, the PTO would like to permit correction of the paper copy, at the least, during the pendency of a given application by reference to the computer readable copy thereof if both the paper and computer readable forms were submitted at the time of filing of the application and the totality of the circumstances otherwise substantiate the proposed correction. A mere discrepancy between the paper copy and the computer readable form may not, in and of itself, be sufficient to justify a proposed correction. In this regard, the PTO will assume that the computer readable form has been incorporated by reference into the application, when the paper and computer readable forms were submitted at the time of filing of the application. The PTO will attempt to accommodate or address all correction issues, but it must be kept in mind that the real burden rests with the applicant to ensure that discrepancies between the paper copy and the computer readable form are minimized. Applicants should be aware that there will be instances where the applicant may have to suffer any consequences of discrepancies between the two. All corrections would be made by appropriate fee-paid petitions. The paper copy would also serve as the official copy for priority purposes. The PTO does not desire to be bound by a requirement to permanently preserve computer readable forms for support, priority or correction purposes. For example, the PTO will make corrections, where appropriate, by reference to the computer readable form as long as the computer readable form is still available to the PTO. However, once use to the PTO for processing has ended, i.e., once the PTO has entered the data contained on the computer readable form into the appropriate database, the PTO does not intend to further preserve the computer readable form submitted by the applicant.

The last two sentences of § 1.821(e) set forth the procedure to be followed when a computer readable form of a new application is identical with a computer readable form of another application. In that situation, an applicant may make reference to the other application and computer readable form in lieu of filing a duplicate computer readable form in the new application.

Section 1.821(f) requires that the paper and computer readable copies of the "Sequence Listing" be accompanied by a statement that the content of the paper and computer readable copies are the same, at the time when the computer readable form is submitted. This statement must be a verified statement if it is made by a person not registered to practice before the PTO, such a statement may be made by the applicant.

Section 1.821(g) requires compliance with the requirements of paragraphs (b) through (f), as discussed above, if they are not satisfied at the time of filing under 35 U.S.C. 111 or at the time of entering the national stage of an international application under 35 U.S.C. 371, within one month from the date of a notice requiring compliance. Failure to comply will result in the abandonment of the application. Submissions in response to requirements under this paragraph must be accompanied by a statement that the submission includes no new matter. This statement must be a verified statement if made by a person not registered to practice before the PTO. Again, such a statement may be made by the applicant. Extensions of time in which to reply to a requirement under this paragraph are available pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136. When an action by the applicant is a bona fide attempt to comply with these rules and it is apparent that compliance with some requirement has inadvertently been omitted, the opportunity to explain and supply the omission will be given before the question of abandonment is considered. See 37 CFR § 1.135(c).

Section 1.821(h) requires compliance with the requirements of paragraphs (b) through (f), as discussed above, within one month from the date of a notice requiring compliance in an international application filed in the United States Receiving Office under the Patent Cooperation Treaty (PCT), if the above noted requirements are not satisfied at the time of filing. Submissions in response to requirements under this paragraph must be accompanied by a statement that the submission does not include new matter or go beyond the disclosure in the international application as filed. This statement must be a verified statement if made by a person not registered to practice before the PTO. Such a statement may be made by an applicant. International applications that fail to comply with any of the requirements of paragraphs (b) through (f) of this section will be searched to the extent possible without the benefit of the information in computer readable form.

Section 1.821(i) makes clear that neither the presence nor absence of information which is not required under the rules will create a presumption that such information is necessary to satisfy any of the requirements of 35 U.S.C. 112. Further, this paragraph states that the grant of a patent on an application that is subject to §§ 1.821 through 1.825 constitutes a conclusive presumption that the granted patent complies with the requirements of these rules. This paragraph has been added to address the concerns with respect to the weight that may ultimately be accorded an omission of an item of information which is not required under the rule, regardless of whether that item has been designated as "recommended" or "optional."

Section 1.821(j) has been added to facilitate administrative processing of all application papers, computer readable forms and fees filed under this section. Accordingly, all such application papers, computer readable forms and fees filed in the PTO should be marked "Box SEQUENCE."

Symbols and format to be used for nucleotide and/or amino acid sequence data. (Section 1.822)

Section 1.822 sets forth the format and symbols to be used for listing nucleotide and/or amino acid sequence data. The codes for representing the nucleotide and/or amino acid characters in the sequences are set forth in the tables of paragraphs (b)(1) and (b)(2) of this section. For the purpose of setting forth the sequence in the "Sequence Listing," only those symbols in paragraph (b)(1) for "Base codes" and in paragraph (b)(2) for "Amino acids" are to be used, as further set forth in paragraphs (c) and (e) of this section. No other symbols shall be used in nucleotide and amino acid sequences. The "Modified base controlled vocabulary" in paragraph (p)(1) and the "Modified and unusual amino acids" in paragraph (p)(2) are not to be used in setting forth the sequences; but, they may be used in the description and/or the "Sequence Listing" corresponding to, but not including, the sequence itself. However, a modified base or amino acid may be presented in a given sequence as the corresponding unmodified base or amino acid if the modified base or amino acid is one of those listed in paragraphs (p)(1) or (p)(2) of this section and the modification is also set forth elsewhere in the "Sequence Listing;" for example, in the features table. Otherwise, all bases or amino acids not appearing in paragraphs (b)(1) or (b)(2) of this section must be listed in a given sequence as "N" or "Xaa," respectively, with further information given elsewhere in the "Sequence Listing."

In paragraphs (b)(2) and (e) of § 1.822, the use of three-letter codes for amino acids is preferred over the one-letter codes from the perspective of facilitating the examiner's review of the application papers, including the "Sequence Listing," and the public's, as well as the examiner's, use of the printed patents. The modified Authorin program that the PTO will make available to the public will have the capability of converting from one- to three-letter amino acid codes and printing the amino acid sequence in three-letter codes regardless of input.

Paragraphs (d) through (p) of § 1.822 set forth the format for presenting sequence data. These paragraphs set forth the manner in which the characters in sequences are to be grouped, spaced, presented and numbered.

It should be noted that paragraph (d) of this section requires that amino acids corresponding to codons in the coding parts of a nucleotide sequence be listed below the corresponding codons. This is the opposite of the location set forth in the proposed rules. The fact that the representation of double stranded nucleotide sequences will not be permitted in the "Sequence Listings" has obviated the need to accommodate those situations in which the coding regions of the primary coding strand of a double stranded nucleotide sequence and the amino acids corresponding to the codons in the coding strand of that nucleotide sequence are depicted. In those situations, it was considered that the correspondence between the amino acids and the codons in the primary coding strand could most clearly be illustrated by positioning the amino acids above the nucleotides rather than below the nucleotides, as is more conventionally done. This arrangement was then, for the purpose of consistency, extended to the representation of all amino acids that corresponded to codons in the coding regions of a nucleotide sequence. As stated above, because double stranded nucleotides will not be permitted in the "Sequence Listing," there is no longer a need to depict amino acids above corresponding codons. As such, paragraph (d) as adopted requires the depiction of amino acids corresponding to codons in the coding parts of a nucleotide sequence immediately below, not above, the corresponding codons. Further, in paragraph (d) of this section, the situation in which a codon spans an intron has been addressed. In those situations, the "amino acid symbol shall be typed below the portion of the codon containing two nucleotides." This sentence was added to clarify the representation of an amino acid that corresponds to a codon that spans an intron.

In view of the number of comments that were received in which there was a misunderstanding of the requirements relating to the depiction of the coding regions in nucleotide sequences as well as the amino acids corresponding to the codons in those coding regions, it should be noted that the rules do not, in any way, require the depiction of coding regions or the amino acids corresponding to the codons in those coding regions. Paragraph (d) of this section only requires that where amino acids corresponding to the codons in the coding parts of a nucleotide sequence are depicted, they must be depicted below the corresponding codons. (Emphasis added.) There is absolutely no requirement in the rules to depict coding regions. Nor is there a requirement to separately list the amino acids corresponding to the codons in the coding parts of a nucleotide sequence unless the applicant desires to discuss the amino acids as a separate sequence. That is, when the coding parts of a nucleotide sequence and their corresponding amino acids have been identified, if applicant desires to discuss those amino acids in the coding parts of the nucleotide as a separate sequence, those amino acids must also be set forth as a separate sequence. The separate submission of the amino acid sequence that corresponds to the coding parts of a nucleotide sequence is, however, recommended and encouraged because the amino acid sequence may not be captured in the sequence database if it is only presented in the mixed-mode format.

Paragraphs (f) through (i) of this section are considered to be self-explanatory.

Paragraph (j) of this section states that nucleotide sequences shall only be represented by a single strand, in the 5' to 3' direction, from left to right. That is, double stranded nucleotides shall not be represented in the "Sequence Listing." A double stranded nucleotide may be represented as two single stranded nucleotides, and any relationship between the two may be shown in the drawings.

The presentation and enumeration procedures for amino acid sequences are set forth in paragraphs (k) and (m) of this section. Two alternatives are presented for numbering amino acid sequences. Amino acid sequences may be numbered with respect to the identification of the first amino acid of the first mature protein or with respect to the first amino acid appearing at the amino terminal. The enumeration procedure for nucleotides is set forth in paragraph (l) of this section. Sequences that are circular in configuration are intended to be encompassed by these rules, and numbering procedures for them are provided in paragraph (n) of this section. The numbering procedures set forth in paragraphs (k) through (n) of this section are not necessarily intended to be consistent with all currently employed numbering procedures. The objective here is to establish a reasonable numbering procedure that can readily be followed and adhered to in the future. As a whole, these formatting procedures also reflect those that have been agreed to for electronic data exchange with the JPO and the EPO.

In paragraph (o) of this section the procedures for presenting and numbering gapped and hybrid sequences are set forth. The reference to partial sequences in the proposed rule has been deleted because a partial sequence would necessarily be numbered as a separate sequence. A sequence that is made up of one or more noncontiguous segments of a larger sequence or segments from different sequences shall be presented as a separate sequence. As previously noted, these changes have been made to address the concerns that the requirements for presentation and numbering of partial, gapped and hybrid sequences were ambiguous.

Paragraph (p) of this section provides the codes for representing modified nucleotide bases and modified and unusual amino acids. The use of the codes set forth in paragraph (p) of this section is discussed above.

Requirements for nucleotide and/or amino acid sequences as part of the application papers. (Section 1.823)

Section 1.823 sets forth the informational requirements for inclusion in the separate part of the disclosure on paper copy that would be submitted in accordance with §1.821(c). This section lists the items of information that are to be included in the "Sequence Listing," which constitutes the separate part of the disclosure on paper copy. The items of information are to be presented in the "Sequence Listing," immediately preceding the actual nucleotide and/or amino acid sequence, in the order in which those items are listed in this section. Page and line length requirements are set forth. The requirement to use a fixed width font to present sequence data is also set forth. This latter requirement is made to ensure that the desired sequence character spacing and numbering is maintained upon printing. The heading for each item of information shall not include the parenthetical explanatory information included in this section.

In §1.823, the items of information are broken down into two categories. The first category is directed to "GENERAL INFORMATION" and includes information relating to the application being filed and the diskette/tape being submitted. It is likely that this information will be applicable for all sequences and, as such, will need to be set forth only once in a given "Sequence Listing." The second category is directed to "INFORMATION FOR SEQ ID NO:X" and includes information that, most likely, will be specific for each sequence disclosed. Where more than one sequence is disclosed, this category will be repeated and subsequent headings should be set forth as:

"(2) INFORMATION FOR SEQ ID NO:2;" "(2) INFORMATION FOR SEQ ID NO:3;" etc. Throughout the above two categories, the items of information are further broken down into categories relating to whether their submission is mandatory (M), recommended (R) or optional (O). Certain items are also designated as those that may repeat (rep) in a given "Sequence Listing." The numbering of repeated items should remain constant so that the overall numbering scheme of the "Sequence Listing" conforms to that specified in this section. The first category includes those items for which inclusion in the "Sequence Listing" is mandatory. These mandatory items of information relate to the patent application, the computer readable form, basic sequence data and the applicable priority or PCT data. A new mandatory item of information, relative to those set forth in the proposed rules, has been added to these final rules. This item relates to the number of sequences set forth in the "Sequence Listing." The reference in paragraph (b)(1)(vi)(C) of §1.823 to "F-terms" relates to the key-word indexing of patents that is being undertaken by the JPO in conjunction with their automation plans. The second category includes those items for which inclusion in the "Sequence Listing" is recommended, but not required. These recommended items of information provide further information relating to the sequence listed. These additional items of information are of interest to examiners and will create a more comprehensive database; as a result, the items would serve to facilitate sequence searching. The third category includes items of information that are primarily for the purpose of providing more complete information upon dissemination, for which inclusion in the "Sequence Listing" is also optional.

Throughout paragraphs (b)(1) and (b)(2) of §1.823, the items of information relating to patent applications and patent publications should be provided, keeping in mind the appropriate standards that have been established by the World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO).

In paragraph (b)(1)(i) of §1.823, the item of information relating to "APPLICANT" should be limited to a maximum of the first ten named applicants in the application. Similarly, in paragraph (b)(2)(x) of §1.823, the item of information relating to "AUTHORS" should be limited to a maximum of the first ten named authors in the publication.

In paragraph (b)(2)(ix) of §1.823, relating to "FEATURES" or the description of the points of biological significance in a given sequence, it is recommended, but not required, that the information that is provided by the applicant conform to the controlled vocabulary that is set forth in GenBank's "Feature Representation in Nucleotide Sequence Data Libraries," Release 57.0, as may be amended. Further, the feature "LOCATION" should be specified using the syntax of the DDBJ/EMBL/GenBank Feature Table Definition.

In paragraph (b)(2)(x) of §1.823, publication information for a given sequence is collected. The publication information encompasses both patent-type publications and non-patent literature publications. Information item "(K) RELEVANT RESIDUES IN SEQ ID NO: X" is intended to collect information relating to the correspondence between a sequence set forth in the "Sequence Listing" and published sequence information. The starting (FROM) and end (TO) positions in the listed sequence that correspond to the published sequence information should be set forth.

A sample "Sequence Listing" is included as Appendix I, following this notice. As indicated in the sample "Sequence Listing," only information that is applicable to a given sequence need be listed in the "Sequence Listing." The sample "Sequence Listing" also serves to illustrate that when the coding parts of a nucleotide sequence and their corresponding amino acids have been identified, if applicant desires to discuss those amino acids in the coding parts of the nucleotide as a separate sequence, those amino acids must also be set forth as a separate sequence. In the given sample, it can be assumed that the applicant desired to discuss the amino acids as a separate sequence. This convention will minimize ambiguities that may result in those instances where the amino acids corresponding to the coding parts of a nucleotide sequence constitute two separate amino acid sequences. In those instances, if an applicant desires to discuss the two separate amino acid sequences, they must be separately presented in the "Sequence Listing." Further, in those instances when applicant desires to discuss, as separate sequences, all three reading frames of the coding regions of a nucleotide sequence, six separate sequences should be set forth in the "Sequence Listing" to minimize confusion. These six sequences would include three nucleotide sequences separately showing each of the three reading frames of the coding regions of the sequence and three separate amino acid sequences corresponding to the translation of the three reading frames of the nucleotide sequence. A complete listing of abbreviated headings for all items of information is provided in Appendix II, also following this notice. For purposes of clarity, the appropriate responses for "(ii) MOLECULE TYPE" are also set forth in Appendix II, but only those that are applicable should be included in a given "Sequence Listing." After the heading for each item in the "Sequence Listing," the appropriate information or a yes/no answer should be provided. Where "SEQ ID NO:X" appears, the appropriate sequence identification number should be provided.

Form and format for nucleotide and/or amino acid sequence submissions in computer readable form. (Section 1.824)

Section 1.824 sets forth the form for sequence submissions in computer readable form. Any computer operating system may be utilized to produce a sequence submission, provided that the system is capable of producing a file having the characteristics specified in §1.824, and is capable of writing the properly formatted file to one of the acceptable diskettes or tapes. Currently, the computer readable form is being limited to diskettes or tapes. However, as noted above, it is contemplated that this may be broadened in the future in light of progress in the technology for developing and establishing databases of this type. That is, it is possible that this may be broadened in the future to encompass other media and formats. If a given sequence and its associated information cannot practically or possibly fit on a single diskette or tape, as is required in paragraph (d) of this section, an exception via a non-fee petition to waive this provision will normally be granted. As set forth in paragraph (g) of §1.824, the computer readable forms that are submitted in accordance with these rules will not be returned to the applicant. Paragraph (h) of §1.824 requires the labeling, with appropriate identifying information, of the computer readable forms that are submitted in accordance with these rules.

Amendments to or replacement of sequence listing and computer readable copy thereof. (Section 1.825)

Section 1.825 sets forth the procedures for amending the "Sequence Listing" and the computer readable copy thereof. The procedures that have been defined in this section involve the submission of either substitute sheets of the "Sequence Listing" or substitute copies of the computer readable form, in conjunction with statements that indicate support for the amendment in the application, as filed, and that the substitute sheets or copies include no new matter. The requirement for statements regarding the absence of new matter follows current practice relating to the submission of substitute specifications, as set forth in 37 CFR 1.125. Paragraph (c) of §1.825 explicitly addresses the situation where amendments to the "Sequence Listing" are made after a patent has been granted, e.g., by a certificate of correction, reissue or reexamination. Paragraph (d) of §1.825 addresses the possibility and presents a remedy for the situation where the computer readable form may be found by the PTO to be damaged or unreadable.

Other Considerations

The rule change is in conformity with the requirements of the Regulatory Flexibility Act (Pub. L. 96-354), Executive Orders 12291 and 12612, and the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980, 44 U.S.C. 3501 et seq.

The General Counsel of the Department of Commerce certified to the Chief Counsel for Advocacy, Small Business Administration, that the rule change will not have a significant impact on a substantial number of small entities (Regulatory Flexibility Act, Pub. L. 96-354) due to the limited number of entities, both small and otherwise, that are involved in the relevant technology. Further, the costs associated with the rule change would not have a significant impact on overall costs associated with filing patent applications because the rule change adopts standards, procedures, and formats which are becoming industry and international norms.

The Patent and Trademark Office has determined that this rule change is not a major rule under Executive Order 12291. The annual effect on the economy will be less than $100 million. There will be no major increase in costs or prices for consumers, individual industries, Federal, State or local government agencies, or geographic regions. There will be no significant adverse effects on competition, employment, investment, productivity, innovation, or on the ability of United States-based enterprises to compete with foreign-based enterprises in domestic or export markets.

The Patent and Trademark Office has also determined that this notice has no Federalism implications affecting the relationship between the National Government and the States as outlined in Executive Order 12612.

The rule contains a collection of information subject to the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980, 44 U.S.C. 3501 et seq. Collections of information relating to patent applications have previously been approved by the Office of Management and Budget under code 0651-0011. For the great majority of applications that will be filed having nucleotide and amino acid sequences falling within the limits defined herein, applicants will not have to expend any substantial extra time to comply with these rules over and above that previously approved for patent applications. For the most part and as noted above with regard to current practice in the industry, the required information will have already been keyed into a computer system. As such, compliance with these rules will involve only the additional submission of relevant application and computer readable form information and a minor, one-time, revision of the format for presenting sequence data, after which, no additional expenditure of time for format compliance will be necessary. Any burden that may be attributed to the submission of relevant application and computer readable form information may, in fact, be more than offset by the fact that compliance with these rules will have the substantial benefit of reducing the overall time necessary to prepare applications, because a given sequence will only have to be set forth once in an application and further references thereto will be made by means of a sequence identifier. Accordingly, compliance with these rules is estimated to take approximately fifteen additional minutes, including time for reviewing instructions, maintaining data needed, and completing and reviewing the collection of information. This collection of information has been approved by the Office of Management and Budget under code 0651-0024, due to expire on June 30, 1992. Send comments regarding this burden estimate or any other aspect of this collection of information, including suggestions for reducing this burden, to the Office of Management and Organization, Patent and Trademark Office, Washington, D.C. 20231; and to the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs, Office of Management and Budget, Washington, D.C. 20503. Attention: Paperwork Reduction Project 0651-0024.

Lists of Subjects in 37 CFR Part 1:

Administrative practice and procedure, Courts, Freedom of information, Inventions and patents, Reporting and record-keeping requirements, Small businesses.

For the reasons set out in the preamble and under the authority granted to the Commissioner of Patents and Trademarks by 35 U.S.C. 6, the Patent and Trademark Office is amending Title 37 of the Code of Federal Regulations as set forth below.

PART 1—RULES OF PRACTICE IN PATENT CASES

1. The authority citation for 37 CFR Part 1 would continue to read as follows:

AUTHORITY: 35 U.S.C. 6 unless otherwise noted.

2. A new, undesignated center heading, new §§1.821 - 1.825, and new Appendices A and B are added to Subpart G - Biotechnology Invention Disclosures to read as follows:

APPLICATION DISCLOSURE CONTAINING NUCLEOTIDE AND/OR AMINO ACID SEQUENCES

§1.821 Nucleotide and/or amino acid sequence disclosures in patent applications.

(a) "Nucleotide and/or amino acid sequences" as used in §§1.821 through 1.825 is interpreted to mean an unbranched sequence of four or more amino acids or an unbranched sequence of ten or more nucleotides. Branched sequences are specifically excluded from this definition. Nucleotides and amino acids are further defined as follows:

(1) "Nucleotides" are intended to embrace only those nucleotides that can be represented using the symbols set forth in §1.822(b)(1). Modifications, e.g., methylated bases, may be described as set forth in §1.822(b), but shall not be shown explicitly in the nucleotide sequence.

(2) "Amino acids" are those L-amino acids commonly found in naturally occurring proteins and are listed in §1.822(b)(2). Those amino acid sequences containing D-amino acids are not intended to be embraced by this definition. Any amino acid sequence that contains post-translationally modified amino acids may be described as the amino acid sequence that is initially translated using the symbols shown in §1.822(b)(2) with the modified positions, e.g., hydroxylations or glycosylations, being described as set forth in §1.822(b), but these modifications shall not be shown explicitly in the amino acid sequence. Any peptide or protein that can be expressed as a sequence using the symbols in §1.822(b)(2) in conjunction with a description elsewhere in the "Sequence Listing" to describe, for example, modified linkages, cross links and end caps, non-peptidyl bonds, etc., is embraced by this definition.

(b) Patent applications which contain disclosures of nucleotide and/or amino acid sequences, in accordance with the definition in paragraph (a) of this section, shall, with regard to the manner in which the nucleotide and/or amino acid sequences are presented and described, conform exclusively to the requirements of §§1.821 through 1.825.

(c) Patent applications which contain disclosures of nucleotide and/or amino acid sequences must contain, as a separate part of the disclosure on paper copy, hereinafter referred to as the "Sequence Listing," a disclosure of the nucleotide and/or amino acid sequences and associated information using the symbols and format in accordance with the requirements of §§1.822 and 1.823. Each sequence disclosed must appear separately in the "Sequence Listing." Each sequence set forth in the "Sequence Listing" shall be assigned a separate identifier written as SEQ ID NO:1, SEQ ID NO:2, SEQ ID NO:3, etc.

(d) Where the description or claims of a patent application discuss a sequence listing that is set forth in the "Sequence Listing" in accordance with paragraph (c) of this section, reference must be made to the sequence by use of the assigned identifier, in the text of the description or claims, even if the sequence is also embedded in the text of the description or claims of the patent application.

(e) A copy of the "Sequence Listing" referred to in paragraph (c) of this section must also be submitted in computer readable form in accordance with the requirements of §1.824. The computer readable form is a copy of the "Sequence Listing" and will not necessarily be retained as part of the patent application file. If the computer readable form of a new application is to be identical with the computer readable form of another application of the applicant on file in the Office, reference may be made to the other application and computer readable form in lieu of filing a duplicate computer readable form in the new application. The new application shall be accompanied by a letter making such reference to the other application and computer readable form, both of which shall be completely identified.

(f) In addition to the paper copy required by paragraph (c) of this section and the computer readable form required by paragraph (e) of this section, a statement that the content of the paper and computer readable copies are the same must be submitted with the computer readable form. Such a statement must be a verified statement if made by a person not registered to practice before the Office.

(g) If any of the requirements of paragraphs (b) through (f) of this section are not satisfied at the time of filing under 35 U.S.C. 111 or at the time of entering the national stage under 35 U.S.C. 371, applicant has one month from the date of a notice which will be sent requiring compliance with the requirements in order to prevent abandonment of the application. Any submission in response to a requirement under this paragraph must be accompanied by a statement that the submission includes no new matter. Such a statement must be a verified statement if made by a person not registered to practice before the Office.

(h) If any of the requirements of paragraphs (b) through (f) of this section are not satisfied at the time of filing, in the United States Receiving Office, an international application under the Patent Cooperation Treaty (PCT) applicant has one month from the date of a notice which will be sent requiring compliance with the requirements, or such other time as may be set by the Commissioner, in which to comply. Any submission in response to a requirement under this paragraph must be accompanied by a statement that the submission does not include new matter or go beyond the disclosure in the international application as filed, such a statement must be a verified statement if made by a person not registered to practice before the Office.

(i) Neither the presence nor the absence of information which is not required under §§1.821 through 1.825, in an application shall create any presumption that such information is necessary to satisfy one or more of the requirements of 35 U.S.C. 112. Further, the grant of a patent on an application that is subject to the requirements of §§1.821 through 1.825 shall constitute a conclusive presumption that said patent complies with the requirements of §§1.821 through 1.825.

(j) Envelopes containing only application papers, computer readable forms and fees filed under this section should be marked "Box SEQUENCE."

§1.82 Symbols and format to be used for nucleotide and/or amino acid sequence data.

§ 1.824 Form and format for nucleotide and/or amino acid sequence submissions in computer readable form.

(a) The computer readable form required by §1.821(e) shall contain a printable copy of the "Sequence Listing," as defined in §§1.821(c), 1.822 and 1.823, recorded as a single file on either a diskette or a magnetic tape. The computer readable form shall be encoded and formatted such that a printed copy of the "Sequence Listing" may be recreated using the print commands of the computer/operating-system configuration specified in paragraph (f) of this section.

(b) The file in paragraph (a) of this section shall be encoded in a subset of the American Standard Code for Information Interchange (ASCII). This subset shall consist of all the printable ASCII characters including the ASCII space character plus line-termination, pagination and end-of-file characters associated with the computer/operating-system configurations specified in paragraph (f) of this section. No other characters shall be allowed.

(c) The computer readable form may be created by any means, such as word processors, nucleotide/amino acid sequence editors or other custom computer programs; however, it shall be readable by one of the computer/operating-system configurations specified in paragraph (f) of this section, and shall conform to the specifications in paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section.

(d) The entire printable copy of the "Sequence Listing" shall be contained within one file on a single diskette or magnetic tape unless it is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that it is not practical or possible to submit the entire printable copy of the "Sequence Listing" within one file on a single diskette or magnetic tape.

(e) The submitted diskette or tape shall be write-protected such as by covering or uncovering diskette holes, removing diskette write tabs or removing tape write rings.

Reference Collection of U.S. Patents Available for Public Use in Patent Depository Libraries

The following libraries, designated as Patent Depository Libraries (PDLs), receive current issues of U.S. Patents and maintain collections of earlier-issued patents. The scope of these collections varies from library to library, ranging from patents of only recent years to all or most of the patents issued since 1790.

These patent collections, which are organized in patent number sequence, are available for use by the public free of charge. Each of the PDLs, in addition, offers supplemental reference publications of the U.S. Patent Classification System, including the Manual of Classification, Index to the U.S. Patent Classification, Classification Definitions, and provides technical staff assistance in their use to aid the public, in gaining effective access to information contained in patents. CASSIS (Classification And Search Support Information System); which provides direct, on-line access to Patent and Trademark Office data, is available at all PDLs. Facilities for making paper copies of patents from either microfilm or paper collections are generally provided for a fee.

Since there are variations in the scope of patent collections among the PDLs and in their hours of service to the public, anyone contemplating use of the patents at a particular library is urged to contact that library, in advance, about its collection and hours in order to avert possible inconvenience.

SECTION 1.—INTERNATIONAL CLASSIFICATION

The short titles associated below with the international class numbers are terms designed merely for quick identification and are not an official part of the international classification. The full names of international classes are given in section 6.1 of the trademark rules of practice.

The designation "U.S. Cl." appearing in this section refers to the U.S. class in effect prior to Sep. 1, 1973 rather than the international class which applies to applications filed on or after that date. For adoption of international classification see notice in the OFFICIAL GAZETTE of Jun. 26, 1973 (911 O.G. TM 210).

SECTION 2.—INTERNATIONAL CLASSIFICATION

The short titles associated below with the international class numbers are terms designed merely for quick identification and are not an official part of the international classification. The full names of international classes are given in section 6.1 of the trademark rules of practice.

The designation "U.S. Cl." appearing in this section refers to the U.S. class in effect prior to Sep. 1, 1973 rather than the international class which applies to applications filed on or after that date. For adoption of international classification see notice in the OFFICIAL GAZETTE of Jun. 26, 1973 (911 O.G. TM 210).

SECTION 1.—INTERNATIONAL CLASSIFICATION

The short titles associated below with the international class numbers are terms designed merely for quick identification and are not an official part of the international classification. The full names of international classes are given in section 6.1 of the trademark rules of practice.

The designation "U.S. Cl." appearing in this section refers to the U.S. class in effect prior to Sep. 1, 1973 rather than the international class which applies to applications filed on or after that date. For adoption of international classification see notice in the OFFICIAL GAZETTE of Jun. 26, 1973 (911 O.G. TM 210).

Reference Collection of U.S. Patents Available for Public Use in Patent Depository Libraries

The following libraries, designated as Patent Depository Libraries (PDLs), receive current issues of U.S. Patents and maintain collections of earlier-issued patents. The scope of these collections varies from library to library, ranging from patents of only recent years to all or most of the patents issued since 1790.

These patent collections, which are organized in patent number sequence, are available for use by the public free of charge. Each of the PDLs, in addition, offers supplemental reference publications of the U.S. Patent Classification System, including the Manual of Classification, Index to the U.S. Patent Classification, Classification Definitions, and provides technical staff assistance in their use to aid the public, in gaining effective access to information contained in patents. CASSIS (Classification And Search Support Information System); which provides direct, on-line access to Patent and Trademark Office data, is available at all PDLs. Facilities for making paper copies of patents from either microfilm or paper collections are generally provided for a fee.

Since there are variations in the scope of patent collections among the PDLs and in their hours of service to the public, anyone contemplating use of the patents at a particular library is urged to contact that library, in advance, about its collection and hours in order to avert possible inconvenience.

SECTION 1.—INTERNATIONAL CLASSIFICATION

The short titles associated below with the international class numbers are terms designed merely for quick identification and are not an official part of the international classification. The full names of international classes are given in section 6.1 of the trademark rules of practice.

The designation "U.S. Cl." appearing in this section refers to the U.S. class in effect prior to Sep. 1, 1973 rather than the international class which applies to applications filed on or after that date. For adoption of international classification see notice in the OFFICIAL GAZETTE of Jun. 26, 1973 (911 O.G. TM 210).

SECTION 2.—INTERNATIONAL CLASSIFICATION

The short titles associated below with the international class numbers are terms designed merely for quick identification and are not an official part of the international classification. The full names of international classes are given in section 6.1 of the trademark rules of practice.

The designation "U.S. Cl." appearing in this section refers to the U.S. class in effect prior to Sep. 1, 1973 rather than the international class which applies to applications filed on or after that date. For adoption of international classification see notice in the OFFICIAL GAZETTE of Jun. 26, 1973 (911 O.G. TM 210).

SECTION 1.—INTERNATIONAL CLASSIFICATION

The short titles associated below with the international class numbers are terms designed merely for quick identification and are not an official part of the international classification. The full names of international classes are given in section 6.1 of the trademark rules of practice.

The designation "U.S. Cl." appearing in this section refers to the U.S. class in effect prior to Sep. 1, 1973 rather than the international class which applies to applications filed on or after that date. For adoption of international classification see notice in the OFFICIAL GAZETTE of Jun. 26, 1973 (911 O.G. TM 210).
